'Some don't have anybody'

■ Being homeless can become death spiral

Shirley, Ray and Steven. These are just a handful of names listed on a memorial for the homeless who have died in the Evansville area. Roughly 80 people are remembered as part of this memorial, with some eight or nine still to be added.

Second of three parts

Among the recent deaths to hit the homeless community, "One was murdered. A few were weather-related (deaths). It's not been a good year," said Luzada Hayes, executive director of Aurora, an Evansville outreach agency which works with the homeless. Elizabeth, Bernard and Keith. Who were they? And how did they get here? How did they become homeless? Hayes said one of the main factors is economics. "We have quite a few who can't afford housing, they get evicted and then that eviction is a barrier for them in trying to get other housing," she said. "For someone on fixed incomes, they're struggling to find affordable housing. If people are working minimum wage jobs, they're likely not going to have enough for housing. If people spend 50 to 60 percent of their income on housing, they don't have enough for basics." "Some people don't have anybody. They don't have resources," Hayes said. "So once they hit an economic spin, they don't have anyone to help get them on their feet." "People become homeless for a variety of reasons," said Charla Jackson Peter with the Kentucky Housing Corporation. "Health problems, family conflicts, limited life choices and the lack of a support system are frequent causes of homelessness. Economic factors such as the loss of employment or the lack of affordable housing, are playing increasing roles as well."

Angela Nix, manager at The Shelter for Women and Children, said the lady who lives in this room with her kids is an example of someone at the shelter by no fault of her own. "You see the hopelessness in their eyes because they've been working and have been trying and it's still not enough," Nix said.

Shoppers getting Christmas season off to big start here

■ 'Business is booming today. In all honesty, there's no budget'

By Beth Smith

Was it the sound of Christmas bells or cash registers ringing in the shopping season on Friday? Likely, it was a little bit of both. At Kmart on Zion Road, shoppers filled the business for the second round of Black Friday sales. For this retail store, Black Friday actually started at 8 p.m. Thursday, producing a heavy volume of shopping traffic, according to store manager, Kevin Meyers. "Friday was real good. Strong and steady," he said. "Thanksgiving Day was stronger ... it always is." Shoppers this year seemed to be after high-ticket items such as televisions and tablet computers, Meyers said. There doesn't seem to be any particular toy people are determined to purchase, he said. "They were kind of in all of the (toy) aisles." If there's one thing he noticed about this year's Christmas shoppers, he said, their interests are "a little more spread out. This year, they are in every department ... not just isolated pockets in electronics. They're in hardware, clothing ... everywhere." So far this season, the Layaway Angel that so inspired people last Christmas by paying off people's layaway accounts at Kmart hasn't made an appearance yet, Meyers said. However, the holidays have just begun. A few doors down from Kmart, Bath & Body Works was packed with people. Men, women and children surrounded stands of wonderfully scented candles, body sprays and lotions to

Black Friday is changing to Thanksgivingpalooza

By Anne D'Innocenzio

This season could mark the end of Black Friday as we know it. For decades, stores have opened their doors in the wee hours on the day after Thanksgiving. But this year, major chains such as Target and Sears ushered customers in on Thanksgiving itself, even before the turkey leftovers had gotten cold, turning the traditional busiest shopping day of the year into a two-day affair. Despite an outcry from some employees, both stores and shoppers seemed to like it. Some people went shopping with a full belly, going straight from the dinner table to the stores. Others slept off their big meal and went to the mall before daybreak on Black Friday. "I ate my turkey dinner and came right here," said Rasheed Ali, a college student in New York City who bought a 50-inch TV for $349 and a sewing machine for $50 when Target opened at 9 p.m. on

House will consider limited GOP immigration bill

■ Party leaders ready to tackle real reform

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republicans still smarting from their poor showing among Hispanics in the presidential election are planning a vote next week on immigration legislation that would both expand visas for foreign science and technology students and make it easier for those with green cards to bring their immediate families to the U.S. Republican leaders made it clear after the election that the party was ready to get serious about overhauling the nation's dysfunctional immigration system, a top priority for Hispanic communities. Taking up what is called the STEM Jobs Act during the lame-duck session could be seen as a first step in that direction. The House voted on a STEM bill — standing for science, technology, engineering and mathematics — in September, but under a procedure requiring a two-thirds majority. It was defeated, with more than 80 percent of Democrats voting against it, because it offset the increase in visas for high-tech graduates by eliminating another visa program that is available for less-educated foreigners, many from Africa. Republicans are changing the formula this time by adding a provision long sought by some immigration advocates — expanding a program that allows the spouses and minor children of people with permanent residence, or green card, to wait in the United States for their own green cards to be granted. There are some 80,000 of these family-based green cards allocated every year, but there are currently about 322,000 husbands, wives and children waiting in this category and

Feds pursuing group charged with selling nonexistent cars

■ Four arrested for international fraud operation

By Brett Barrouquere
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — Federal authorities are pursuing three fugitives and have arrested four other people in what they describe as a $1.4 million international fraud operation stretching from Kentucky to Europe and involving the sale of nonexistent cars.

The criminal case, involving seven people who used at least 20 aliases and five fictitious companies, involved advertising cars on websites such as eBay and Autotrader and arranging for wire transfers to pay for the vehicles.

Once the money was received, prosecutors said, it was run through multiple bank accounts in different names, but no car ever produced for the buyer.

Federal prosecutors in Lexington said the group transferred money over a two-year period from banks in Kentucky to accounts in Hungary and Romania.

Jelahni Williams, who goes by the alias “Ruben Thompson,” pleaded guilty Monday to conspiracy to commit wire fraud. In his plea agreement, Williams told prosecutors he teamed up with Nicholas Corey Garner, another defendant, and agreed to receive and send wire transfers using his real name and the identity of “Ruben Thompson.” Williams said he sent between $10,000 and $30,000 to someone in Bucharest, Romania over a three-day period in May 2012 in exchange for 10 percent of the amount sent and an extra $50.

“Jelahni is relatively low-level in this case,” said Williams’ attorney, Patrick Nash of Lexington. “He’s not like some of the others, who are higher up.”

U.S. Marshals caught up with Garner and another defendant, Eli Holley, in Indiana in mid-September. Both have been returned to Kentucky and pleaded not guilty. Holley’s attorney, Joyce Merritt, declined to comment on the charges. Garner’s attorneys did not return messages seeking comment.

Authorities said they are still searching for Petrica Octavian Stoian, who took part in the scheme from Budapest, Hungary; Sorin Costea, who also goes by the alias “Adrian Flocea,” and also took part in the scheme from Budapest, Hungary; and Sabrina Carmichael, who uses four aliases including “Valerie Pisano” and operated in Kentucky opening bank accounts in the names of the businesses.

Former lawmaker has name removed from exposition center

By Roger Alford
Associated Press

FRANKFORT — Corbin leaders have taken former Senate President David Williams’ name off an exposition center, complaining that he didn’t do enough to protect the city in a dispute with Knox County officials over revenue from an occupational tax.

City Commissioner Ed Tye said Friday that the decision to delete the Republican’s name from the David L. Williams Southeastern Kentucky Ag & Expo Complex was made before he resigned from the state Senate earlier this month to accept a judicial appointment.

a 5,000-seat concert hall that draws singers and musicians from across the country.

Such a move by local political leaders to pan Williams would have been unlikely while he was at the top of the legislative pyramid.

But Democratic Gov. Steve Beshear appointed Williams circuit judge in southern Kentucky effective Nov. 2, ending two decades of legislative service that made him a household name in Kentucky. Beshear and Williams were often at odds, and the appointment was widely viewed as an effort by the governor to get his political enemy out of Frankfort.

Thomas More features new Bible exhibit

The Associated Press

CRESTVIEW HILLS, Ky. — An exhibit at Thomas More College featuring the Bible is anything but typical.

The exhibit that opened last week features a Heritage Edition of Pentateuch from The Saint John’s Bible. The Kentucky Enquirer reports that it was the first time scholars at the college had seen such a Bible. The Pentateuch includes the first five books of the Old Testament.

The Heritage Edition is a fine art reproduction of The Saint John’s Bible, which was commissioned in 1998 to be the first handwritten Bible since the introduction of the printing press. The exhibit at the Eva G. Farris Art Gallery includes 10 illuminated pages from other sections of The Saint John’s Bible.

“There’s an enormous amount of artistry and thought that’s gone into the Heritage Edition to give the viewer as close an experience as possible to the real thing,” said Stacy Smith Rogers, a spokeswoman for Thomas More College.

Sweet eats

A sloth bear bites down on a pumpkin at the Cleveland MetroParks Zoo Tuesday. The zoo's grizzly and sloth bears got early holiday treats for Thanksgiving.

Williams said he’s OK with Corbin’s decision to remove his name.

“I never asked that it be put on there, so that’s fine with me,” Williams said Friday. “As a matter of fact, at the time, I asked them not to put it on there.”

Tye said Corbin leaders believed that Williams, who for more than a decade was the most powerful Republican in Frankfort, could have helped the city in a long-standing battle with Knox County officials over the occupational tax revenue. Senate Floor Leader Robert Stivers, R-Manchester, was able to get legislation passed earlier this year that prevented Corbin from collecting 25 percent of Knox County’s occupational tax.

Tye said that move cost Corbin about $600,000 a year.

“The people in Corbin are not pleased, needless to say,” Tye said. “And neither are we.”

Williams’ name was only taken off signage. On legal documents, the building will keep the name.

Publicly, the building is now known as The Corbin Arena. Its houses

Williams helped to orchestrate a Republican takeover in the state Senate in 1999, in a move that propelled the small-town lawyer into one of the most recognizable faces in Kentucky politics. He became Senate president in 2000, earning a reputation over the years for a keen intellect and a sometimes prickly disposition.

Williams ran against Beshear last year in a vitriolic gubernatorial election that showed an intense dislike between the two. However, Beshear has a record of appointing Republicans to more lucrative government positions to get them out of the Senate.

Previously, Beshear had made Senate Floor Leader Dan Kelly a circuit judge and appointed Senate Appropriations and Revenue Committee Chairman Charlie Borders to the Public Service Commission.

Williams said he did fight for Corbin to keep the occupational tax revenue.

“Anybody who says I didn’t stand up for Corbin and stand up for what I think was right is inappropriate,” he said.

Ky. judge rules hospital is public

LOUISVILLE — A Jefferson County judge has ruled that University of Louisville Hospital must comply with Kentucky’s open-records law.

The Courier-Journal reported that Senior Circuit Judge Martin McDonald said in a ruling Wednesday that the hospital is a public entity and its board appointed or approved by the university, a public agency.

The hospital had argued it is a private corporation because it is controlled by a board.

The ruling was a victory for the newspaper, WHAS-TV and the American Civil Liberties Union of Kentucky.

Attorney Jon Fleischaker, who represented both news organizations, said the ruling will allow the public access to information about the hospital after its partnership announced last week with KentuckyOne Health.

The hospital said in a statement it’s disappointed and reviewing the ruling to consider an appeal.

New film added to crash documentary

ASHLAND, Ky. — Documentary filmmaker Michael Crisp says he has added new footage to his film, “The Very Worst Thing,” about a 1958 bus crash in eastern Kentucky that killed 26 children and the bus driver.

The documentary tells the story of the tragic crash, which happened on Feb. 18 near Prestonsburg in Floyd County when the bus collided with a tow truck and plunged over an embankment into the Big Sandy River.

Crisp told The Independent that the footage will be included when the film is shown at the SIPP

Theatre in Paintsville next month.

He said he hoped that the documentary would spur a search for forgotten photos and film of the disaster.

Union members picket Wal-Mart

LOUISVILLE — About 60 people picketed outside a Louisville Wal-Mart as part a nationwide movement to protest labor practices at the world’s largest retailer.

The Courier-Journal reported the Friday protest did not appear to include employees of the store being picketed.

Pickers were made up of members from several unions and a group called Kentucky Jobs with Justice.

While picketers shouted, “This is what a union looks like!” at least one onlooker retorted, “This is what lazy looks like!”

The protest lasted about two hours.

One shopper with a shopping basket loaded down with purchases said he wanted to support the picketers but he couldn’t pass up the Black Friday deals.

Fomer teacher remembers Bill Womack

It is not in fashion to say a man loves another man, but never being in fashion, I must confess I loved Bill Womack. As my principal my first years in Henderson, he became a father figure to me. I found him to be a man of his word, a man of great wisdom and a mentor to me in my early years of teaching.

I saw Bill Womack under fire many times. Never did I see him betray his core principles or sacrifice someone in the name of political correctness, never did I see him walk away from a righteous cause nor did I see him abandon an underdog. It might seem ironic that I would call such a small man a giant, but he will always be to me.

I shall miss Bill Womack. Our conversations at our annual City High School faculty reunions were a highlight of the year for me. Visits to his Cherry Street home with Bill and Etta were pilgrimages to my past. I shall miss the gruff voice on my phone, the halo of smoke that always surrounded him and the humor that no one expected to come from his mouth.

This morning a resignation letter he got from a teacher that he kept and quoted constantly comes to mind. “When you are up to your butt in alligators, it is hard to remember your prime objective is to drain the swamp.” I have to stop and remember before I can go on with my day. Bill, the alligators of loss are all around me, but like you, I will continue to try to drain the swamp.

Robert P. Lee, vice president NAACP, senior member Henderson County Black History Committee

Reader takes issue with election reporting

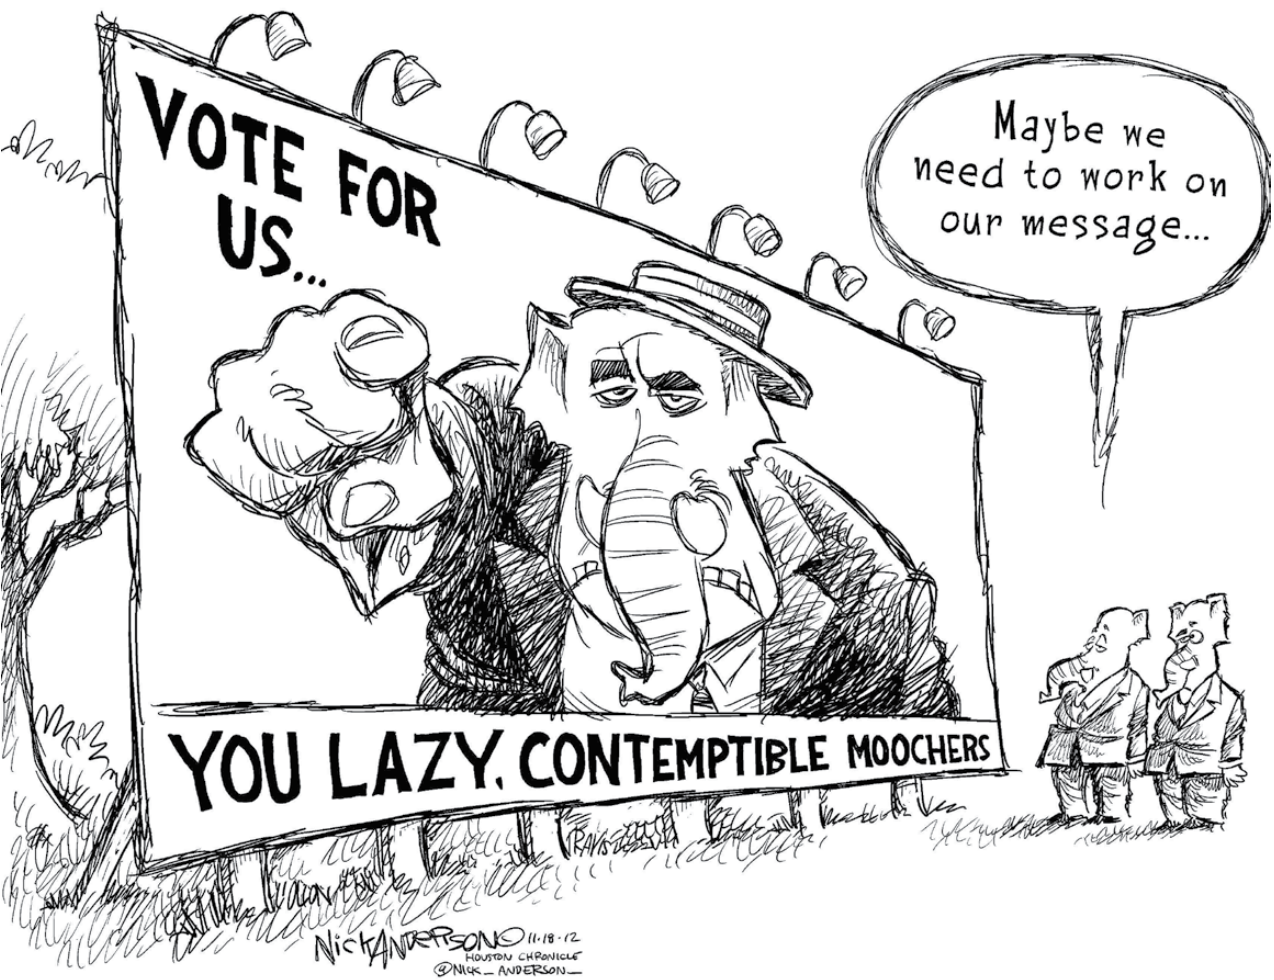

On Nov. 11, I picked up my Gleaner and was drawn to Frank Boyett’s piece on the local election, “Hite draws well, shows support across city.” I read in depth the 14 precincts that Ms. Hite carried. I also viewed the total votes received by the candidates.

After reading the whole piece, I was drawn to the back page, a continuance of the A1 story. It mentions that Mr. Robert Pruitt carried 10 precincts. The part that struck me, not as odd, but I’d like to know what The Gleaner or Mr. Boyett is saying when writing that Mr. Pruitt carried East and West Bells by large margins, which historically have larger percentages of black voters. Are you saying if these were not historically black precincts, he wouldn’t have carried them? That’s exactly what’s being said.

Why this mention of blacks as though we vote on the basis of color rather than merits? The fact is that others carried all the “white” “rich” precincts. Why was it not mentioned that if every black who was able to vote, voted for Mr. Pruitt it still wouldn’t amount to 4,983 votes? Blacks are not monolithic.

The gerrymandering of the districts in the ’90s was designed to spread the black vote so as to weaken a candidate who may seek office that is black or a white who could possibly garner black votes.

Well, I’ll burst the bubble of ignorance and take The Gleaner and Mr. Boyett off the box. How many blacks have held elected office in Henderson County, Ky.? I’m sure that when blacks were finally given the right to vote, denied by Kentucky and other states in total violation of the U.S. Constitution, we voted for white people. Is it because they were white? What if blacks who did vote, did so because Barack Obama and Mr. Pruitt are black? So what! We’ve been voting for folk who care more for animals than they do for black people.

What Mr. Boyett should do is find out why so many folk seeking office bypass the black community. I’ll tell you why. They feel like to hell with it. We will go to our old outdated base.

The Gleaner and Mr. Boyett can try to reduce our intellect to race, but history shows that we have thrived in this country in spite of the worst holocaust perpetrated in the history of humanity.

Annaveive Kissinger, Louisville

Reunion committee’s hard work praised

On Oct. 5 and 6, I attended what I am sure was the special event of the year for Henderson. The event was the celebrating of the 1952 class of Barret Manual Training High School 60-year class reunion.

Without the local “kids” meeting and planning this get-together, the rest of us out here in America would be unable to benefit from their tireless effort. This is a two-day event, and they always have managed to keep us entertained. We have lost quite a few of our graduates in the last 60 years, but it is always uplifting to go back and pick up where we left off the last time.

To those of you at home who are still healthy and didn’t respond to the committee’s hard work — shame on you. These people work very hard to get us together, and I know it is very frustrating when it seems no one cares. We are very fortunate to have these who care so much.

They are so good they even brought one of our classmates “back from the dead!” It seems he is living in Texas now but he was there in body, soul and mind. We had a good showing from people from all over the country. There were some in walkers, wearing oxygen masks, walking with canes and just beautiful, beautiful people. Then there were people like me, just grunting and groaning but having a wonderful time!

Please allow me to send everlasting gratitude to Bill and Ethel Rideout, Merrie and Riley Gibson, Dorothy and Luther Duncan, Sally Green Carter and Mrs. R.K. Steele. And to Jimmie Milan for chauffeuring a vanload of us along with two other cars to Camp Breckinridge for a wonderful tour. Did that bring back the memories. Please forgive me if I have left anyone’s name out. I am sure there are others who helped. It was a very exciting two days, and I’ll see you in five years!

Hal Branson, Henderson County

Every day should be time of thanksgiving

Jesus said, “Two men went to the temple to pray. One was a proud, self-righteous Pharisee, and the other a cheating tax collector. The proud Pharisee prayed, ‘I thank you God I am not as other men are, especially that tax collector.’”

I too am thankful I’m not as other men are — homeless, foodless, faithless, jobless, healthless, friendless, and so much more.

This Thanksgiving and every day ought to be a thanksgiving day. May we be careful to thank God for the things we have, and the things we have not.

And may God help us to remember he gives to us that we might give to others.

Capital’s forecast: Cloudy with random chance of being right

From Scripps Howard News Service

The residents of the national capital tend to obsess about the weather, especially during the winter. Summers are easy: Hazy, hot and humid. Chance of afternoon thundershowers.

Winter is a different story. Washingtonians are notorious for not doing winter well.

The schools close, the power goes out, people strip the store shelves bare, even people who don’t own cats stock up on cat food and the powers-that-be send the government workers home at the height of the storm, making Napoleon’s retreat from Moscow look like an orderly, well-planned affair.

Thus, Washingtonians tend to be obsessive about the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration’s annual winter forecast; it’s important enough that The Washington Post put out a special supplement, paid for largely by apologetic local utilities. The mid-Atlantic got hit this year by a couple of major convulsions of nature, including Superstorm Sandy that sideswiped Washington.

Brace yourself. NOAA says, as The Washington Post put it, “this winter could be mild. Or it could be severe. There could be a lot of snow. Or not much at all.

But what about the capital region generally?

NOAA hemmed and hawed, scuffed its toe in the carpet, looked at the ceiling and opined, after mentioning difficulty, unpredictability and uncertainty, “and so our forecast for the local area is equal chances for either above-, near- or below-average temperature and precipitation.”

Make your plans accordingly. You can’t say you haven’t been warned.

GUEST COLUMN

Electoral College vital but reform needed

By Tim Crawley

While reading last week’s column by the “gravy man,” regarding the humiliating defeat of the Republican Party, I continually tried to remind myself of just how fortunate I am to live in a republic.

A fundamental principle being that a minority will be protected from a majority.

Democracy is equally as important, but left unchecked, it can have serious consequences. James Madison, the fourth president and one the greatest minds in our nation’s history, cautioned us in the Federalist Papers No. 10 of an overreaching majority.

The Electoral College is an important piece of protection, but due to the demographics of our ever-changing country, a change is in order.

A change that probably wouldn’t set well with the anti-electoral college crowd.

Al Gore in particular. Yes, he won the popular vote in 2000.

Of the approximately 122 million votes cast Nov. 6, President Obama received 51.6 percent.

So if the gravy man tells us this was a convincing victory, a mandate for the president, why the sea of red on the national electoral map? Why?

When you consider that just over 50 percent of the population lives within 50 miles of the coast line and increased urbanization (people moving from rural areas to big cities), an election can be won by targeting a handful of states as well as a handful of large cities.

A recipe for pure, winner-take-all democracy, something President Madison warned us of.

For simplicity and magnitude, I’ll use California as an example of the change that’s needed in the Electoral College.

As the biggest prize, they have 53 representatives and two senators, giving them 55 electoral votes, a staggering 20 percent of the 270 needed. With the winner-take-all system, Obama’s 4 percent edge in the popular vote gave him all 55.

A system more in keeping with a republic would have Obama winning two (senators) for the popular vote advantage and then splitting the remaining votes by percentage.

This model would have given Obama 31 to Romney’s 24. For those in control of California, a hard sell this would be.

Nancy Pelosi and Maxine Waters would fight to the death on this change. FYI, Maine and Nebraska do not use the winner-take-all system.

What about the gravy man’s accusation that Kentucky, as well as other red states, are the biggest takers of entitlements? Guilty as charged!

Yes, I agree with him. Yet, what he didn’t disclose or seemed to overlook: Why would red-state folk, who statistically suck up entitlements like bacon grease, flour and buttermilk, vote against the very party that provides the artery-clogging entitlements?

Could it be that even though they know it’s wrong and vote against entitlement peddlers, they abuse the system because it’s too easy? Why would anyone take advantage of the “system”? Because they can.

We’re officially an entitlement-craved society. Just from my daily observations, we’ve got entitlement issues at the lowest scale.

Many believe that if their momma was issued a handicapped parking placard in 2004 for a knee replacement, they’re entitled to that placard until 2015.

I’m convinced, by 2020, every parking spot at Wal-Mart will have a wheelchair insignia painted on it.

What changes do we need for our nation to regain its strength and health?

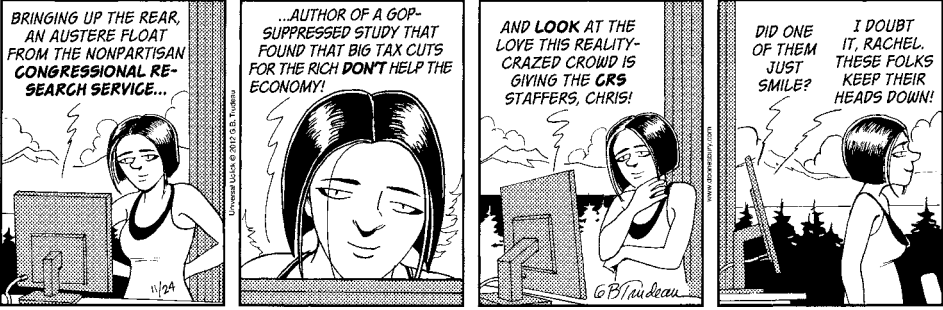

Electoral College reform and a new recipe with a common staple in the American diet.

From what I’ve heard about public school lunches, Michelle Obama has done a fine job curbing children’s appetites.

Maybe she can head up the “War on Gravy.”

TRENTON, N.J. — Ranbaxy Pharmaceuticals Inc. has recalled dozens of lots of its generic version of cholesterol drug Lipitor because some may contain tiny glass particles, the latest in a string of manufacturing deficiencies that once led U.S. regulators to bar imports of the Indian company's medicines.

Ranbaxy, a subsidiary of Ranbaxy Laboratories Ltd., India's biggest drugmaker, is operating under increased scrutiny from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration because of quality lapses at multiple Ranbaxy factories over the past several years. The FDA also has alleged the company lied about test results for more than two dozen of its generic drugs several years ago.

On Friday, Ranbaxy posted a notice on its U.S. website, saying it's recalling 10-, 20- and 40-milligram doses of tablets of atorvastatin calcium. That's generic Lipitor, the cholesterol fighter that reigned for years as the world's top-selling drug.

The recall includes 41 lots of the drug, nearly all with 90 pills per bottle, but three lots contain 500 pills per bottle. Medicine batches typically contain many thousands of pills.

Ranbaxy spokesman Chuck Caprariello did not answer questions or provide any additional information beyond the statement on the company's website.

"Ranbaxy is proactively recalling the drug product lots out of an abundance of caution," the website statement read. "This recall is being conducted with the full knowledge of the U.S. FDA."

Rep.-elect Tammy Duckworth, D-Ill., who lost both legs in combat, is the highest-profile vet in the new class of freshman representatives entering Congress. Veterans groups say the influx comes at a time when the overall number is on a steady decline, so it is a welcome one.

War experience gives vets knowledge, perspective

By Kevin Freking

WASHINGTON — As representative-elect Tammy Duckworth, D-Ill., sees it, her path to Congress began when she awoke in the fall of 2004 at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. She was missing both of her legs and faced the prospect of losing her right arm.

Months of agonizing therapy lay ahead. As the highest-ranking double amputee in the ward, Maj. Duckworth became the go-to person for soldiers complaining of standard care and bureaucratic ambivalence.

Soon, she was pleading their cases to federal lawmakers, including her state's two U.S. senators at the time — Democrats Dick Durbin and Barack Obama of Illinois. Obama arranged for her to testify at congressional hearings. Durbin encouraged her to run for office.

Veterans' groups say the influx of Iraq and Afghanistan veterans is welcome because it comes at a time when the overall number of veterans in Congress is on a steep and steady decline. In the mid-1970s, the vast majority of lawmakers tended to be veterans.

For example, the 95th Congress, which served in 1977-78, had more than 400 veterans among its 535 members, according to the American Legion. The number of veterans next year in Congress will come to just more than 100. Most served during the Vietnam War era. In all, 16 served in Iraq or Afghanistan.

"We're losing about a half a million veterans a year in this country," said Tom Tarantino, chief policy officer at Iraq and

Afghanistan Veterans for America. "We are not going to be in a world where a significant plurality of people spent some time in the military, so to have 16 men and women who fought in this current Congress is incredibly significant."

Their election victories also provide a sense of assurance to veterans.

"The biggest fear we have as veterans is that the America people are going to forget us," Tarantino said. "When you have an 11-year sustained war, the fight doesn't end when you pull out."

Duckworth said certain programs need close examination, particularly in the area of government contracts. She said she "can actually stand up and talk about defense spending in a way that will be realistic without being attacked for lack of patriotism or not being strong on defense."

Support for gay marriage growing

When Californians voted to outlaw same-sex marriage four years ago, one factor — both revealing and alarming to the civil rights community — was African-Americans' support for the ban. Proposition 8, which passed with a 52 percent majority, had 58 percent support among black voters.

It was a different story Nov. 6 in Maine, Maryland and Washington state, where voters endorsed marriage rights for gays and lesbians, and in Minnesota, where state law already prohibits same-sex marriage but voters rejected a Prop. 8-style ban in their state constitution.

Surveys show a majority of African-Americans now support those rights, said Ben Jealous, president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which campaigned hard for same-sex marriage. In Maryland, where blacks make up almost 30 percent of the voters, their backing was crucial.

"We're talking about it as a civil rights issue," and people are listening, Jealous said in an interview last week during a visit to San Francisco. He also said President Barack Obama's endorsement of same-sex marriage rights in May, followed shortly afterward by an endorsement from the NAACP, was a "game changer."

If the issue reached the ballot again in California, "we would see majority black support," Jealous said. "I'm very confident that ... we would win."

son in a car while he went shopping for Black Friday bargains, then went home with his new 51-inch flat screen television and left the toddler behind.

Police, alerted by store security, found the boy asleep in the vehicle in a Kmart parking lot at about 1:30 a.m. Friday.

They forced their way into the car and took the boy to the hospital as a precaution.

Meanwhile, they tracked the man to his Springfield home.

He told police he lost the boy while shopping, panicked and called someone else for a ride. The boy's mother was working.

The 34-year-old man was not arrested and not immediately charged, but police say they expect to charge him with reckless endangerment to a child.

Party train could hit tracks in 2013

LAS VEGAS — As if a week-end in Las Vegas isn't wild enough for Southern Californians, a Nevada entrepreneur is about to add five more hours of party to either end.

After striking an agreement with Union Pacific Railroad last week, the Las Vegas Railway Express is one step closer to bringing to life the X Train, a luxurious "party train" complete with big screen TVs, recliners and two ultra lounges.

"The whole idea is when you get on a train, you feel like you're in Las Vegas," said Michael Barron, president and CEO of the $100 million venture that hopes to launch its maiden voyage on New Year's Eve 2013. "It's essentially a nightclub on wheels."

Iran criticizes Turkish request for Patriots

BEIRUT — Iran lashed out Friday at Turkey for requesting that NATO supply it with Patriot surface-to-air missiles to deploy along the border with Syria, denouncing the step by Ankara as counterproductive.

Iranian parliamentary speaker Ali Larijani made the remarks after a visit to Damascus, a show of support by Tehran to its increasingly diplomatically isolated ally.

"The internal crisis in Syria cannot be solved through the deployment of such weapons," Larijani, who is close to the Islamic Republic's supreme leader, said at a news conference in Beirut where he went after leaving Syria.

Turkey's request earlier this week follows several incidents in which violence has spilled across the border from the civil war in Syria, frequently mortar rounds falling a short distance inside. Patriots would be useful in intercepting ballistic missiles — a much more serious but still hypothetical threat.

KABUL — A Taliban suicide bomber detonated a truck full of explosives Friday in eastern Afghanistan, killing three Afghan civilians and wounding more than 90 people, including several Afghan and NATO troops, officials said.

The early morning explosion in Maidan Shahr, the capital of Wardak Province, also destroyed or damaged several government offices and a local prison, said provincial spokesman Shahidullah Shahid.

The blast occurred in an area that is home to government offices, the provincial governor's office, police headquarters, a prison and a coordination center used by international and Afghan security forces.

Shahid said two men and a woman were killed and 90 people — 75 men, 11 women and four children — were wounded.

PAKISTAN

Country cuts phones to prevent attacks

ISLAMABAD — Pakistan's interior minister said Friday that the government will suspend cellphone service in most parts of the country over the next two days to prevent attacks against Shiite Muslims during a key religious commemoration.

Militants often detonate bombs using cellphones and the Pakistani government has implemented similar service suspensions in the past, but not on such a wide scale.

Today and Sunday are the most important days of Muharram, the first month of the Islamic calendar, which is especially important to Shiites.

Pakistani Shiites on Sunday observe the Ashoura, commemorating the 7th century death of Imam Hussein, the Prophet Muhammad's grandson. The Sunni-Shiite schism over the true heir to Muhammad dates back to that era. Different parts of the Muslim world mark Ashoura on different days — neighboring Afghanistan, for example, observes it on Saturday.

Sunni extremists often target Shiites during Muharram, especially on Ashoura, frequently using cellphones. Several bombings targeting Shiites earlier this week killed over a dozen people.

Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas speaks at his compound in the West Bank city of Ramallah. After Hamas fought Israel to a draw in Gaza, Abbas has no choice but to ignore strong U.S. objections and seek U.N. recognition of a state of Palestine next week.

Israel's Abbas determined to seek U.N. nod for Palestine

RAMALLAH, West Bank — After bitter rival Hamas held its own in a fierce battle with Israel, Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas has no choice but to override U.S. objections and seek U.N. recognition of a state of Palestine next week, his aides said Friday.

But even such recognition, likely to be granted, may not be enough for the Western-backed proponent of nonviolence and a peace deal with Israel to stay relevant and counter the soaring popularity of Gaza's Hamas militants.

Abbas — formally the leader of all Palestinians but only in charge in parts of the West Bank — was in trouble even before being relegated to the role of spectator as Israel and Hamas fought for eight days, starting Nov. 14, then negotiated a truce with the help of Egypt that could lead to easing Israel's long-standing Gaza border blockade.

By comparison, years of effort by Abbas to negotiate the terms of a Palestinian state with Israel have led nowhere.

His West Bank government has been buckling under the worst cash crisis in its 18-year existence, sparking widespread domestic discontent. Hamas, which seized Gaza from Abbas in 2007, emerged from regional isolation after the Arab Spring uprisings brought its parent movement, the Muslim Brotherhood, to power in key countries, including Egypt.

The Gaza fighting sharpened trends already evident before, said analyst Nathan Thrall of the International Crisis Group think tank. "Abbas was truly isolated before this, and this (Gaza) conflict looks like a disaster for him," he said.

Abbas had hoped the U.N. bid will allow him to seize the initiative after years of diplomatic paralysis. Under the plan, the U.N. General Assembly would approve "Palestine" — made up of the West Bank, Gaza and East Jerusalem, areas Israel captured in 1967 — as a nonmember observer state.

Palestine is far from being established, but U.N. recognition would affirm its future borders and enable the Palestinians to join U.N. organizations. Israel, backed by the Obama administration, opposes the U.N. bid as an attempt to bypass negotiations.

GAZACITY, Gaza Strip — Israeli troops fired on Gazans surging toward Israel's border fence Friday, killing one person but leaving intact the fragile two-day-old cease-fire between Hamas and the Jewish state.

The truce, which calls for an end to Gaza rocket fire on Israel and Israeli airstrikes on Gaza, came after eight days of cross-border fighting, the bloodiest between Israel and Hamas in four years.

Gaza health official Ashraf al-Kidra said a 20-year-old man was killed and 19 people were wounded by Israeli fire near the border.

Israel's military said roughly 300 Palestinians approached the security fence at different points, tried to damage it and cross into Israel.

Soldiers fired warning shots in the air, but after the Palestinians refused to move back, troops fired at their legs, the military said.

The truce allowed both Hamas and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to step back from the brink of a full-fledged war. Over eight days, Israel's aircraft carried out some 1,500 strikes on Hamas-linked targets, while Gaza fighters fired roughly the same number of rockets at Israel.

In Cairo, Egypt is hosting separate talks with Israeli and Hamas envoys on the next phase of the cease-fire — a new border deal for blockaded Gaza. Hamas demands an end to border restrictions, while Israel insists Hamas halt weapons smuggling to Gaza.

NATION & WORLD

Extreme weather tough on transportation

■ Making nation’s infrastructure more resilient will be expensive

By Joan Lowy
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Wild weather is taking a toll on roads, airports, railways and transit systems across the country. That’s leaving states and cities searching for ways to brace for more catastrophes like Superstorm Sandy that are straining the nation’s transportation lifelines beyond what their builders imagined.

Despite their concerns about intense rain, historic floods and record heat waves, some transportation planners find it too politically sensitive to say aloud a source of their weather worries: climate change.

Political differences are on the minds of the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials, whose advice on the design and maintenance of roads and bridges is closely followed by states. The association recently changed the name of its Climate Change Steering Committee to the less controversial Sustainable Transportation, Energy Infrastructure and Climate Solutions Steering Committee.

Still, there is a recognition that the association’s guidance will need to be updated to reflect the new realities of global warming.

“There is a whole series of standards that are going to have to be revisited in light of the change in climate that is coming at us,” said John Horsley, the association’s executive director.

In the latest and most severe example, Superstorm Sandy inflicted the worst damage to the New York subway system in its 108-year history, halted Amtrak and commuter train service to the city for days, and forced cancellation of thousands of airline flights at airports in New York, New Jersey and Philadelphia.

In Washington state, “we joked we were having 100-year storms every year,” said Paula Hammond, head of the state’s Department of Transportation.

Last year flooding threatened to swallow up the Omaha, Neb., airport, which sits on a bend in the Missouri River. The ground beneath the airfield became saturated, causing about 100 sinkholes and “soil boils” — uplifted areas of earth where water bubbles to the surface. The airport was spared through a massive effort that included installing 70 dewatering wells and stacking sandbags around airport equipment and buildings.

Record-smashing heat from Colorado to Virginia last summer caused train tracks to bend and highway pavement to buckle. A US Airways jet was delayed at Washington’s Reagan National Airport after its wheels got stuck in a soft spot in the tarmac.

Dallas had more than five weeks of consecutive 100 degree-plus high temperatures. “That puts stress on pavements that previously we didn’t see,” Horsley said.

States and cities are trying to come to terms with what the change means to them and how they can prepare for it. Transportation engineers build highways and bridges to last 50 or even 100 years. Now they are reconsidering how to do that, or even whether they can, with so much uncertainty.

No single weather event, even a storm like Sandy, can be ascribed with certainty to climate change, according to scientists. But the increasing severity of extreme events fits with the kind of changing climate conditions that scientists have observed.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A North Carolina Department of Transportation worker jumps over swirling ocean water recently as he moves traffic cones on the damaged section of N.C. highway 12 just north of the Mirlo Beach area in Rodanthe on Hatteras Island, N.C. Extreme weather is a growing threat to the nation’s lifelines — its roads, bridges, railways, airports and transit systems — leaving states and cities trying to come to terms with a new normal.

entists have observed.

For example, several climate scientists say sea level along New York and much of the Northeast is about a foot higher than a century ago, mostly because of man-made global warming, and that added significantly to the damage when Sandy hit.

Making transportation infrastructure more resilient will be expensive, and the bill would come at a particularly difficult time. Aging highways, bridges, trains and buses already are in need of repair or replacement and no longer can handle peak traffic demands. More than 140,000 bridges are structurally deficient or obsolete. The problem only will worsen as the U.S. population grows.

A congressional commission estimated that all levels of government together are spending $138 billion a year less than is needed to maintain the current system and to make modest improvements.

“The infrastructure of the nation is aging and it’s at risk because, quite frankly, we’re all not investing enough to take care of these facilities,” said Hammond, the chairwoman of the climate committee. “And now we’re facing extreme weather threats that cause us to need emergency response capabilities beyond what we’ve had in the past.”

In Washington state, “we have seen more erratic weather patterns that we haven’t had before, so we really can’t imagine what kind of winter or summer we’re going to have anymore,” Hammond said.

More frequent heavy rainfalls in the western half of the state have increased the volume and velocity of water in rivers and streams, undermining the foundations of bridges. Rising sea levels are eroding coastal roads. In the drier eastern half of the state, more frequent wildfires have forced road maintenance crews to change their methods in an effort to prevent sparks that might cause a blaze.

“Each time you replace a bridge, states have to be thinking about not just what kind of traffic demand there is, but how do I make sure this is a bridge that will withstand the future given the erratic weather patterns and climate change we’re seeing,” Hammond said. “It’s a new layer of analysis.”

About half the states have taken some steps toward assessing their most critical vulnerabilities, experts said. But few have gone to the next step of making preparations. New York was an exception. Not only had transit officials made detailed assessments of the potential effects of climate change, but they’d started to put protections in place. Subway entrances and ventilation grates were raised in low-lying areas to reduce flooding, but that effort was overwhelmed by Sandy.

While more than 97 percent of the scientists who publish peer-reviewed research say that global warming is real and man-made, the issue remains highly charged. In conservative states, the term “climate change” is often associated with left-leaning politics.

The Obama administration has also shied away from talking publicly about adaptation to climate change. Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood’s office refused to allow any department officials to be interviewed by The Associated Press about the agency’s efforts to help states adapt. The Transportation Department and other federal agencies are involved in preparing a national assessment of climate change impacts and adaptations that may be needed. Their report is expected to be finished in the next few months.

Qatar set to host major climate talks, trying to boost its world image

By Micahel Casey
Associated Press

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — When the tiny desert nation of Qatar was chosen to host the latest round of United Nations climate change negotiations, environmentalists were stunned.

Talks were already in trouble, and now the high-level discussions were moving to a member of OPEC that had shown little interest in climate change and appointed a former oil minister to lead the negotiations, which start Monday. The country’s economic boom, driven by vast oil and gas reserves, has led to free electricity for citizens and an abundance of gas-guzzling SUVs in the capital, Doha. It has also made Qatar the world’s highest per capita carbon dioxide emitter.

“Nongovernment organizations had mixed feelings about it,” said Wael Hmaidan, a Lebanese activist who is director of the Climate Action Network. “Some were very concerned and found it a threat knowing that Qatar has not been engaged in the climate change negotiations, while others found it an opportunity to get the climate debate higher on the political agenda of the region.”

Activists complain Qatar has shown little leadership so far and been much less

The 45 meter Wind Tower brings upper level wind to the public square at the Masdar Institute campus as a part of Masdar City in Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates. Hosting the climate talks is the latest bid by Qatar to flex its muscles on the international stage, following its successful bid to host the 2022 World Cup and its backing of Libyan and Syrian rebels.

transparent than previous hosts of the annual climate conference.

Among the most vocal has been advocacy group Avaaz, which asserts that “having one of the OPEC leaders in charge of climate talks is like asking Dracula to look after a blood bank.” It also criticized Qatari leaders for attending a big oil conference just ahead of the talks, a sign its priorities may be misplaced.

But publicly, delegates have been careful to avoid criticizing the emirate. The top United Nations climate official said preparations are on track.

“I’m not concerned,” said Christiana Figueres, the executive secretary of the United Nations Climate Change secretariat. “We are very grateful. Qatar not only offered, but literally fought for the opportunity and privilege of hosting.”

“We have been impressed with work of the Qatar team and how they have brought themselves very quickly up to speed with the complexity of the issues,” she said.

Hosting the conference is part of the tiny Gulf nation’s campaign to project itself as a powerhouse on the world stage, after winning the bid to host the 2022 World Cup and backing rebellions in Libya and Syria.

It also offers the ruling family an opportunity to change perceptions about a region that in the past has seemed concerned only with protecting its vast oil and gas reserves from the impact of any climate agreement.

Qatar and its Persian Gulf neighbors insist that portrayal is outdated.

The United Arab Emirates has, for example, endorsed the extension of the Kyoto Protocol, which limits the greenhouse emissions of industrialized countries. It was also the first Gulf nation to sign on to the Copenhagen Accord supporting a long-term deal to reign in emissions.

Even Saudi Arabia, which in the past led opposition to a global agreement capping greenhouse gas emissions, has moderated its position and shaken up its negotiating team.

Leaders in the Gulf also are more vocally acknowledging the impact of climate change, endorsing the science that shows emissions are on rise and recognizing they are not immune to the impact of global warming. They also are promising to do their part to combat it.

“I describe Qatar as the epicenter of climate change. There is no water, no food. It’s barren desert,” said Fahad Bin Mohammed al-Attiya, chairman of Doha’s COP18 organizing committee. “Any problems to harvest season or productivity outside the Gulf would immediately impact our ability to have access to food at reasonable global prices.”

Qatar and the UAE have rolled out green building codes in an effort to shift away from energy-wasting high-rises that dominate the skyline. Qatar says it will produce 20 percent of its energy from renewables by 2024, while Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the UAE have announced plans to invest heavily in solar power.

The UAE, which has set a target to generate 7 percent of its electricity from renewables by 2020, is home to the International Renewable Energy Agency and the government-run Masdar Institute, which has built the first phase of a pre-planned city powered by renewable sources. The UAE has also announced plans to build four nuclear reactors, the first of which should be operational by 2017.

“We don’t want to continue to be seen as only an exporter of oil through barrels or gas through pipelines,” said Sultan Ahmed al-Jaber, the chief executive officer of Masdar and UAE’s Special Envoy for Energy and Climate Change.

“Our approach should be an energy mix approach where oil and gas continues to play a role, nuclear continues to play a catalytic role but the only energy source that will grow over time will be renewable energy,” he said. “That is simply because the technology is maturing and the world better recognizes the need for advancing this technology.”

Activists, though, want to see Gulf countries go further at the climate talks.

Former Irish President Mary Robinson said they should commit to voluntary emissions targets, like former conference host Mexico did. Gulf nations’ total emissions are a fraction of China’s and the United States’, but setting targets would help inspire others to take action.

Others have called on the Gulf — which has some of the world’s highest per capita incomes thanks to its vast petrodollars — to contribute to the U.N.’s Green Climate Fund. The fund aims to channel $100 billion annually by 2020 to aid to poor countries. So far, Gulf countries have contributed nothing.

Corps cuts Missouri River flow; shipping threatened

By Jim Salter
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — The Army Corps of Engineers on Friday began reducing the flow from a Missouri River reservoir, a move expected to worsen low water conditions on the Mississippi River and potentially bring barge traffic to a halt within weeks.

One result of this year's drought, the worst in decades, has been a big drop in water levels on both the Mississippi and Missouri rivers.

The Corps of Engineers office in Omaha, Neb., announced earlier this month plans to reduce the outflow from the Gavins Point Dam near Yankton, S.D. Corps spokeswoman Monique Farmer told The Associated Press that the reduction began as scheduled Friday morning. By late-morning, the flow that had started at 37,500 cubic feet per second had been cut to 35,500 cubic feet per second.

Farmer said plans call for a gradual reduction down to 12,000 cubic feet per second by Dec. 11.

"It's just an extended period of drought, and that forecast is expected to persist into the spring," Farmer said. "We're hoping Mother Nature brings some snow this winter, but we've been told to expect low, stable conditions, that it's probably going to remain dry."

The Mississippi is nearing historic lows between St. Louis and Cairo, Ill. Barges are already required to carry lighter loads and the middle of the river could be closed to barge traffic if the water level at St. Louis dips below minus 5 feet. It was at minus 0.45 feet Friday.

A zero river reading at St. Louis was established more than a century ago. It's the point at which people at that time thought the river would never drop below.

The National Weather Service forecast for river levels extends only as far as Dec. 6. It calls for the Mississippi River to get to minus 3.7 feet at St. Louis by then. Businesses that ship on the river and their trade groups expect to get to minus 5 feet by around Dec. 10.

Barge operators and those who ship on the Mississippi have warned that stopping barge traffic would risk economic catastrophe for coal, agriculture, petroleum and other interests. Some companies have said they may have to lay off workers if barge traffic is halted for any significant amount of time.

Barges carry 20 percent of the country's coal and more than 60 percent of its grain exports. Other cargo — such as petroleum products, lumber, sand, industrial chemicals and fertilizer — also gets shipped along the Mississippi River.

Stocks soar on Black Friday; techs lead

The Associated Press

The stock market enjoyed some Black Friday cheer, rising sharply as shoppers braved the annual post-Thanksgiving rush. Major stock indexes closed one of their best weeks of the year.

Traders were encouraged by positive economic news from Germany and China, two engines of global growth. Technology stocks soared after a few weeks of selling. And early reports from retailers suggested strong consumer spending.

Many stores opened earlier than ever this year, allowing for earlier informal reports about their performance.

Technology stocks soared, lifting the Nasdaq composite index by more than 1 percent. Dell, chipmaker AMD and Hewlett-Packard were the top three gainers in the Standard & Poor's 500. Technology rose the most among the index's 10 industry groups.

The stocks were bouncing back after confidence in tech stocks declined broadly, Kinahan said. AMD dropped sharply in recent weeks as investors fretted about its solvency. HP plunged 12 percent on Tuesday after executives said that a company HP bought for $10 billion last year lied about its finances.

The Nasdaq ended up 40.30 points, or 1.4 percent, at 2,966.85. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 172.79, or 1.4 percent, to 13,009.69 — the first time since election day that the Dow closed above 13,000.

The S&P 500 added 18.12, or 1.3 percent, to 1409.15. The rally gave the S&P 500 its biggest weekly point gain since last December — 49 points, or 3.6 percent. The Dow gained 3.4 percent and the Nasdaq almost 4 percent for the week.

The market closed early, at 1 p.m. EST.

Stocks started strong after news that German business confidence rose unexpectedly in November after six straight declines. The gain in a closely watched index

CHICAGO — Grains futures mostly rose Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat for December delivery rose 2.50 cents to $8.4775 a bushel; December corn rose 4.50 cents to $7.4550 a bushel; December oats slipped 1 cent to $3.69 a bushel; while January soybeans rose 10.50 cents to $14.1875 a bushel.

Beef and pork futures rose on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

December live cattle rose 0.88 cent to $1.2895 a pound; January feeder cattle rose 0.50 cent to $1.4787 a pound; while December lean hogs added 0.72 cent to 82.47 cents a pound.

COMMODITIES

NEW YORK — Precious metals advanced Friday, with silver and gold both reaching one-month highs, as a slump in the dollar made them more attractive to hold as investments.

Palladium for December delivery led the gains, rising $16.30, or 2.5 percent, to $667.60 an ounce. December silver gained 76.60 cents, or 2.3 percent, to $34.116 an ounce, and December gold gained $23.20, or 1.3 percent, to $1,751.40 an ounce.

Commodities are typically priced in dollars, and when the dollar's value falls, producers demand more dollars in exchange for their commodities. The dollar fell 0.9 percent against a basket of currencies, its biggest decline in more than two months.

"Commodities are being helped by the weaker dollar," said Art Liming, a futures specialist at Citibank. The gains are "just a mirror of what's going on in the dollar."

The price of oil climbed Friday after Israeli troops fired on crowds in Gaza surging toward a border fence, killing one Palestinian and wounding 19. Benchmark crude finished up 90 cents at $88.28 per barrel in New York.

Heating oil gained 0.5 cents, or 0.2 percent, to $3.0771. Natural gas futures fell 0.2 cents to $3.9010.

In agricultural contracts, wheat, corn and soybeans all advanced.

December wheat gained 3 cents, or 0.3 percent, to $8.48 a bushel. Corn for December delivery rose 4 cents, or 0.5 percent to $7.45, and January soybeans gained 12 cents, or 0.8 percent, to $14.20 a bushel.

The price of coffee was the only commodity to fall, dropping on signs that favorable weather in Brazil will produce a good crop, boosting supplies.

"The weather is good down in Brazil and they've had good flowering. That's keeping anyone from having much buying interest," said Jack Scoville, vice president at Price Futures Group in Chicago.

Brazil is the world's largest producer of coffee beans.

In other metals trading, platinum for January rose $33.20, or 2.1 percent, to $1,617.10 an ounce, and copper for December rose 3.2 cents, or 0.9 percent, to $3.528 an ounce.

Trading volumes were lower Friday and the markets closed earlier than usual with many traders still on vacation after yesterday's Thanksgiving holiday.

News co-anchors quit on the air

BANGOR, Maine — Two news co-anchors for a Maine television station surprised viewers and colleagues by quitting on the air, later citing frustration with their management.

Cindy Michaels and Tony Consiglio announced their resignations at the end of Tuesday's 6 p.m. newscast on WVII.

The two didn't give specific reasons on the air for their sudden departure. Consiglio said that while they enjoyed reporting the news, "some recent developments have come to our attention, though, and departing together is the best alternative we can take."

Michaels said she and Consiglio "are very sorry for having to say goodbye for now, but we'll still be around." She plans to pursue a writing career and paint, and Consiglio said he would continue his career "in a different capacity."

Their boss said Wednesday they had been on their way out the door anyway. He said he was not surprised by the action they took.

Oil prices climb on Mideast fears

NEW YORK — Oil prices climbed Friday after Israeli troops fired on crowds in Gaza surging toward the border fence, killing one Palestinian and wounding 19.

Benchmark crude for January delivery was up 71 cents to $88.09 a barrel at 1 p.m. EST on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Brent, which is used to price international varieties of oil, was up 85 cents to $111.40 a barrel.

Friday's killing is the first violence since a truce between Israel and the militant Hamas group was reached two days ago. Prior to the shooting, oil prices had been falling, thanks mostly to optimism over the stability in the region that the cease-fire agreement provided.

In the U.S., motorists returning from the Thanksgiving holiday are getting the slightest bit of relief. The national average for a gallon of regular unleaded gasoline fell one-tenth of a cent to $3.43. However, that is still 10 cents higher than last Thanksgiving.

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY:

“SANCTIFIED”

If you have ever thought about the word in our title it would seem to suggest something or someone that is truly spiritual. What does God's word have to say on the subject? The words sanctify or sanctified are found 28 times in the New Testament. It means to dedicate or set apart things or persons for God (Matthew 23:17). One who is sanctified has entered a relationship with God by faith in Christ Jesus (Acts 26:18; I Corinthians 6:11). Our study of the book of Acts tells us how the Corinthians were washed/sanctified (Acts 18:8). Luke's record says they heard, believed and were baptized. Sanctification is not a second work of grace. A person is sanctified (cleansed from sins) at the point in time when they become a child of God. Note how

HOMELESS from 1A

Mary Dunham, director of the Henderson Christian Community Outreach, said the nonprofit agency which provides food and other support services, is seeing more and more of the toll that a struggling economy takes on families.

“The economy isn’t helping,” she said. “These are good, hardworking families trying to keep house payments up ... they’ve lost jobs ... and gasoline is a huge problem.”

Rory, Ricky, Cynthia.

Hayes said homeless people come in all ages and from all races, economic and educational backgrounds.

“We’ve seen them ages 16 to 85,” she said. “We’re starting to see a growing group between 18 and 23. That is disconcerting.”

Some of these young people are “throwaways, walk-aways ... some are kids who have parents doing drugs and they don’t want to be around that,” Hayes said. “Some are choosing to leave home. Some are forced out.”

Ron, Tyrone, George.

“Some people come here to live with family and then for some reason it doesn’t work out and they’re out on the street,” Hayes said. “Sometimes people are arguing while traveling (through the area) and people just get put out of the vehicle.”

There are more men than women who are homeless, she said.

“We’ve had people with master’s degrees on the street,” she said.

“Veterans are a subgroup of the homeless,” Hayes said. “We still have some Vietnam vets (who are homeless) and nationally, they are seeing some Iraq War vets.”

“(Soldiers) live in a constant state of hypervigilance and when they come home, they’re struggling to let go of that.”

Another sect of the homeless population is made up of ex-convicts, she said.

Alberta, Emmitt, Jerry.

“The effects of homelessness are extensive and severe,” Peter said. “For the individual, homelessness means more than just a loss of self-esteem. They face dramatically higher rates of infectious disease, mental health problems, physical disorders, disabilities and premature death. They also face heightened risks of becoming incarcerated or institutionalized.”

David, Gerald, Christina, Marvin.

“Homelessness has a dramatic impact on the

The Tooth Fairy was supposed to stop at this room where three little girls stay with their mom at The Shelter for Women and Children, but apparently forgot. So the girls made a sign for the door to make sure the fairy didn’t overlook them again. Even though the family may only be staying at the shelter for a short time, the girls have adjusted to the living circumstances and have made the small room their home.

community as well,” Peter said. “Homelessness takes a tremendous toll on family stability by hindering the ability to find and maintain jobs, hampering the learning process of children who are hungry and disoriented and causing health problems due to stress and exposure to the elements and infectious disease. Because they lack other resources, homeless people tend to use a variety of public systems in inefficient and costly ways.

“The true cost of homelessness is passed to the community through higher demands on law enforcement, corrections, health care, welfare, education and other systems. Though the chronically homeless make up a smaller portion of the homeless population, they use a disproportionate amount of resources,” Peter said.

Hayes agreed that only a small percentage of those without a home are “chronically homeless.”

“Most of the folks we encounter, if we could get them in an apartment, they’d move in the next day.”

That’s true of 26-year-old Sharona of Memphis.

At the time of this interview, Sharona, who declined to use her real name, was living at the House of Bread and Peace in Evansville, awaiting the availability of an apartment.

“After I lost my job in Memphis, I was trying to find another job. I was closing in on being evicted,” she said.

So Sharona left Memphis and traveled to Evansville to live at the House of Bread and Peace.

“I had a relative who came here and got help. I didn’t just want a house,” she said, adding that what she wanted was help.

Sharona said a cycle of depression led to several job losses and even some evictions. At one point in her life, she said, she was living in her car.

“I would park in parking lots or in front of people’s houses,” she said. “I’d take showers at shelters and ate a lot of fast food. It was very miserable. Luckily, I had heat and air.”

Being homeless, she said, “It’s very scary. Traumatizing.”

Thanks to the programs offered at the House of Bread and Peace, Sharona said, “I’ve been working toward taking care of some issues. The next step is getting (a place to live) and continuing to work on my (life) skills.”

Sharona is working full-time and hopes to eventually become employed in child-protective services.

If there’s one common bond among the homeless community, Sharona said it’s “pain.”

“I think most (homeless) want to transition, but some don’t realize if they don’t address their issues, it will be a cycle of incompleteness.”

Sharona said many of the homeless people she’s met and lived with at the House of Bread and Peace are very talented and can move forward with a little help.

“So many here crochet, make jewelry, style hair,” she said. “A lot of homeless people have a lot of potential ...”

The homeless, “shouldn’t be looked at as a disease or like they’re nothing. They’re worthy of respect,” Sharona said.

“I think people need to know that the homeless are just like them,” she said. “They have issues, emotions. They’re loving ... they’re people.”

IMMIGRATION from 1A

on average people must wait more than two years to be reunited with their families. In that past that wait could be as long as six years.

The House proposal would allow family members to come to the U.S. one year after they apply for their green cards, but they wouldn’t be able to work until they actually got the card. It applies to the families of green card holders who marry after getting their residency permits.

Bruce Morrison, a former Democratic congressman from Connecticut who chaired the House immigration subcommittee and authored a 1990 immigration law, said the bill neither increases the number of green cards nor gives people green cards early. But people “get the most important benefit of being able to live legally in the United States with their spouses.”

Morrison, an immigration policy lobbyist who advocates for groups such as American Families United, called the bill a stepping-stone to more comprehensive immigration reform, That Republicans initiated it “to me is a positive gesture that they want to do business on this subject,” he said

Megan Whittlemore, spokeswoman for House Majority Leader Eric Cantor, R-Va., a key proponent of the STEM Act, said the bill is “family friendly, helping spouses and minor children who would otherwise be separated from their families for extended periods of time.”

The bill will be taken up this time under normal procedures requiring only a majority vote, and it is almost certain to pass the Republican-led House. It remains to be seen whether it will engender enough Democratic support to give it momentum as it heads to the Democratic-controlled Senate.

It would give 55,000 green cards a year to doctoral and masters graduates in the STEM fields. The measure, strongly backed by U.S. high-tech companies, would make it easier for people trained in the United States to put their skills to work for American companies rather than non-American competitors.

But the legislation would still eliminate the Diversity Visa Lottery Program which gives out a similar 55,000 green cards a year to those from countries, including many in Africa, with traditionally low rates of immigration to the U.S. That prompted the House’s Hispanic Caucus, Congressional Black Caucus and Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus to all come out against it in September.

The three caucuses said Republicans were trying to increase legal immigration for people they want by ending immigration for people they don’t want.

Crystal Williams, executive director of the American Immigration Lawyers Association, said the bill is a message from Republicans that “we are here and we are ready to talk about immigration reform.”

But she said she doubted it will make much progress in the Senate during the short lame-duck session. People “are now starting to think about broader reform,” she said, adding that a limited bill that doesn’t increase visas won’t get a lot of support.

Natural gas explosion levels Massachusetts buildings

Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — A natural gas explosion in one of New England’s biggest cities on Friday destroyed two buildings and damaged others beyond repair but didn’t kill anyone, authorities said.

Firefighters and gas company workers were among more than a dozen injured people, they said.

The explosion in a downtown area of Springfield, 90 miles west of Boston, blew out all windows in a three-block radius, leaving three more buildings irreparably damaged and prompting emergency workers to evacuate a six-story apartment building that was buckling.

Police Sgt. John Delaney said it looked as though there was a missile strike where the explosion leveled the multistory building at its epicenter.

Officials at two nearby hospitals said a total of 16 victims were transported with injuries but none was critical.

Firefighters responded to the scene at 4:20 p.m. and were investigating a gas leak when the blast happened shortly after 5 p.m.

The explosion, in an area of downtown Springfield with commercial properties and residences, destroyed a building that housed a Scores Gentlemen’s Club.

FRIDAY from 1A

Thanksgiving. “Then I’m going home and eating more.”

This new approach could become a holiday shopping season tradition.

“It’s Black Thursday and Friday combined,” said Jackie Fernandez, a retail expert at the consulting firm Deloitte. “This is going to be a new normal of how we shop.”

It won’t be clear for a few days how many shoppers took advantage of the Thanksgiving hours. But about 17 percent of people said earlier this month that they planned to shop at stores that opened on Thanksgiving, according to an International Council of Shopping Centers-Goldman Sachs survey of 1,000 consumers.

Meanwhile, 33 percent intended to shop on Black Friday, down 1 percentage point from last year. Overall, it is estimated that sales on Black Friday will be up 3.8 percent to $11.4 billion this year, according to technology company ShopperTrak, which did not forecast sales from Thanksgiving Day.

The Black Friday creep began in earnest a few years ago when stores realized that sales alone weren’t enough to lure shoppers anymore, especially with Americans becoming more comfortable buying things online. Opening on Thanksgiving was risky, with some employees and shoppers complaining it was almost sacrilegious.

But many stores evidently felt they needed an edge, especially this season, when many Americans are worried about high unemployment and wondering whether Congress will be able to head off tax increases and spending cuts before the U.S. reaches the “fiscal cliff” in January.

Overall, the National Retail Federation estimates that sales in November and December will rise 4.1 percent this year to $586.1 billion, below last year’s 5.6 percent.

At Wal-Mart, the world’s largest retailer, most of its 4,000 U.S. namesake stores are already open 24 hours year-round. But the chain added special sales at 8 p.m. on Thanksgiving, two hours earlier than a year ago.

The company said that its start to the holiday season was “the best ever,” with nearly 10 million transactions and 5,000 items sold per second from 8 p.m. to midnight on Thanksgiving.

Toys R Us opened at 8 p.m. on Thanksgiving, an hour earlier than last year.

Macy’s, which opened at midnight on Thanksgiving, had 12,000 customers wrapped around its store in New York’s Herald Square.

SHOPPING from 1A

make the most of the seasonal sales.

Webster County resident Gayle Osborne was among them.

Not an early riser by Black Friday standards, Osborne said she’d been shopping since about 7 a.m.

“I’ve got my coupons to get my freebies ... plus Christmas gifts for my girls,” she said.

“So far, I like shopping in Henderson. It doesn’t have the craziness that Evansville has. When someone bumps into you (they apologize), Osborne said, adding that she also doesn’t have to keep a death-grip on any of the items in her hands.

Kevin Middleton, a Bath & Body Works store manager, said the Black Friday business has been “awesome. Business is booming today.”

Asked whether people appear to be shopping within a budget, he said, “In all honesty, there’s no budget.”

If they want it, he said, “they’re getting it.”

On the south end of town at Rural King, customers were being treated to candy and cookies as a gesture of appreciation for the long waits caused by cash registers that wouldn’t work properly, according to store employees. Customers were still getting to purchase wanted or wished for items, it was just taking longer.

Among the hot sellers at Rural King was a gun safe. For the kids, John Deere toys were a hot commodity.

In downtown Henderson, The Gold Mine, was busy with local and out-of-town patrons.

A Louisville resident was purchasing Christmas gifts, including an animal-print scarf, while a Henderson woman appeared to be finding trinkets for herself.

One customer, Mary Lois Judy of Henderson, looked like a 2012 version of the spirit of Christmas present.

Decked out in Christmas plaid pants, a Christmas shirt, a Christmas sweater, Christmas earrings and bracelets and even a Christmas purse, Judy said she had fully embraced the season.

“The day after Thanksgiving, I put the pumpkins away and get out the Christmas apparel,” she said.

Judy said she’s spent Black Friday “taking in all of the Open Houses (in Henderson) and I’ve worked my way downtown.”

She said she is slowly marking things off her shopping list.

“Sometimes I look, and then I go back,” Judy said.

Jan Sandefur, an employee at The Gold Mine, said Friday’s business has been “great.”

“The first hour was slow ... everyone is drifting in now.”

“People are buying a lot of scarves and scarf holders and jewelry,” she said.

Meanwhile, Sandefur said, she’s looking at her schedule to see when it’s her turn to do some shopping.

“I have eight grandchildren,” she said. “They’re always looking for gifts ...”

Vols look to avenge loss to Cats

■ UK hoping to send Phillips out with second straight win over UT

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Tennessee already has fallen short of nearly all its preseason goals. The Volunteers won't reach a bowl game. They didn't avoid a third consecutive losing season. They weren't even able to save the job of coach Derek Dooley, who was fired Sunday. But one goal remains within reach as Tennessee heads into its season finale. The Vols still have a chance to avenge last year's 10-7 loss to Kentucky that ended Tennessee's 26-game winning streak in this annual series. "It was tough last year," Tennessee wide receiver Zach Rogers said. "We didn't come out with the right foot forward and didn't come out with the right mindset. We definitely don't want to do that this year."

Kentucky found a way to beat Tennessee last season while using reserve receiver Matt Roark as its starting quarterback. Tennessee's 26 straight victories over Kentucky had represented the second-longest active winning streak by any team over one opponent, trailing only Penn State's 29 consecutive wins over Temple. Penn State has since extended that streak to 30 games. Now that Kentucky finally has ended its history of frustration against Tennessee, the Wildcats want to start a streak of their own. "It's a game that has been brought back to life, going back and forth now, so we're just trying to keep it in our side," Kentucky defensive tackle Tristian Johnson said. The upset didn't provide much momentum for Kentucky (2-9, 0-7 SEC), which has lost its seven conference games this season by an average margin of 26 points. The Wildcats' struggles resulted in the firing of Joker Phillips, who will close his Kentucky career Saturday by working his second game as a lame-duck coach.

But that result did turn up the heat on Dooley, who left Tennessee with a 15-21 record in three seasons. Dooley declined an opportunity to coach Saturday's game out of concern that his presence would cause a distraction and affect his players' focus. Jim Chaney, who had worked from the press box as Tennessee's offensive coordinator in the first 11 games of the season, will lead to the sidelines Saturday as the Vols' interim head coach. Tennessee (4-7, 0-7) is trying to avoid going winless in SEC competition for the first time in school history. Tennessee already is guaranteed its third consecutive losing season, marking the first time since 1909-11 the Vols will have finished below .500 three straight years. The Vols aren't going to a bowl in back-to-back seasons for the first time since being left out four consecutive years from 1975-78. The Vols have a difference of opinion on how much of a role the revenge factor plays this week. Some players said they're eager to get back at Kentucky. "That's one motivation that we've had since the beginning of the year," Tennessee linebacker Jacques Smith said. "We're definitely going to take it to them this weekend and we're definitely going to hit them in the mouth."

Other Vols downplayed the revenge aspect and instead said they wanted to win this game for a senior class that has endured plenty of adversity. Kentucky is eager to send its coach out as a winner. The Wildcats say they appreciated the fact that Phillips remained with the team even after being fired. Kentucky responded last week with a 34-3 rout of Football Championship Subdivision program Samford in the Wildcats' first game since Phillips' dismissal. They want him to cap his Kentucky career with a second straight victory. "It means a lot for Coach Joker to come back and show us how much he cares about us," Kentucky tailback Raymond Sanders said. "He always preaches don't quit and don't give up. He showed that, he gave us an example by not quitting on us and continuing to come out there and to coach us and push us to become better players and people. It means a lot, and that's why we want to go out there and try to give him our all."

Wildcats run past LIU-Brooklyn

■ Goodwin, Poythress lift Kentucky in 104-75 romp

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LEXINGTON — If Archie Goodwin gets close to a triple double again, the Kentucky freshman doesn't want to know. At the rate he's going right now, that milestone isn't far away. Goodwin scored 22 points and finished a rebound and an assist shy of a triple double on Friday night, an effort that helped the No. 8 Wildcats run away from LIU-Brooklyn 104-75. Winning mattered more to Goodwin than being the first Wildcat to post a triple-double since Chris Mills had 19 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists on Dec. 27, 1988. But at least he knows that achievement is within reach — as long as his teammates keep it to themselves. "I wish they wouldn't have told me, because then I started thinking too much about trying to get it," Goodwin said. "But it was still a good night. I can live with it." Fellow freshman Alex Poythress scored 22 and grabbed nine rebounds, falling just short of his first career double-double. He and Goodwin led the way on a night that five Kentucky players scored in double figures. Freshman forward Nerlens Noel scored 18 points and had eight rebounds for Kentucky (4-1). Graduate transfer guard Julius Mays had 15 points and six assists and freshman center Willie Kentucky's Jarrod Polson (5) shoots under pressure from LIU-Brooklyn's C.J. Garner, left, during the first half of their game at Rupp Arena in Lexington on Friday night.

Cauley-Stein had 12 points for hot-shooting Kentucky, which finished 42 of 62 from the field (68 percent). "It doesn't matter who is scoring," said Poythress, who matched his career high while posting his fourth straight 20-point game. "It just matters who is hot right now. Whoever is hot, just feed it to them and keep going to them." The Wildcats out-rebounded the Blackbirds 41-24 in winning their third straight. But it wasn't easy early. Kentucky had to rally against LIU-Brooklyn (0-4), which led by six mid-way through the first half and 43-40 before the Wildcats closed the half with a 15-0 run. The rout was on after that as Kentucky held LIU-Brooklyn to 33 percent shooting in the second half while outscoring the Blackbirds 49-32. Julian Boyd and Jamal Olasewere each scored 22 points for the Blackbirds, who shot 42 percent overall. "Obviously not the outcome that we were looking for," Blackbirds coach Jack Perri said. "We had about 17 minutes in the first half where we were up 42-40, 43-40 and that big run obviously turned the game around." There were 10 lead changes and nine ties, and in some ways the game resembled what Kentucky faced in Wednesday's 81-70 victory over Morehead State. But whereas Morehead State played tough, physical defense against Kentucky, LIU-Brooklyn came at the Wildcats with quickness and scoring. The Blackbirds averaged 81.4 points per game last season and entered Friday's game at 80.7. For most of the first half the Blackbirds showed the same determination as the Eagles did two nights ago. Boyd got his team started by scoring eight of their first 15 points, including three straight baskets to provide a 15-13 edge. LIU-Brooklyn wasn't afraid to take it inside against Kentucky's big men, either. Olasewere had a dunk and converted a three-point play after a drive on Noel. Boyd added baskets inside and outside and quick 6-foot guard Jason Brickman came off the bench to contribute a couple of shots en route to an eight-point half. The result was LIU-Brooklyn's biggest lead at 32-26, creating some uneasiness among the Rupp Arena crowd of 22,221. "That's why we wanted to play these kind of teams that would come after us, not be afraid, come in here with the attitude that they could win," Kentucky coach John Calipari said.

Cards want victory over UConn on Senior Day

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — Louisville's seniors have a simple reason for wanting to win Saturday's home finale over Connecticut. It hasn't been done in a while. A victory would be the seniors' first in three tries under coach Charlie Strong. The No. 19 Cardinals (9-1, 4-1 Big East) can also achieve double-digit victories for the fourth time in school history, all since 2001. Staying within reach of league-leading Rutgers entering next Thursday's showdown in New Jersey adds more motivation for one of the nation's smallest senior classes. Louisville has 13 overall and just 10 on scholarship, and half of them began their careers as walk-ons. Since going 4-8 as freshmen they've had three straight winning seasons and seek the school's second BCS bowl bid along with a successful home send-off. Though Strong's staff didn't recruit this group, he recognizes the groundwork they've laid for younger classes. "When we came in, we talked about our foundation," Strong said. "I just feel this group is a part of us because they've been with us for three years and they have been a part of watching this program build. You cannot ask for a stronger group of seniors with the leadership they have provided this season." The seniors' steadiness, coupled with young stars such as quarterback Teddy Bridgewater, sprung Louisville to a 9-0 start before falling 45-26 at Syracuse on Nov. 10. The loss ended Louisville's hopes of a perfect season but not its preseason goal of a Big East championship and accompanying BCS berth in the Orange Bowl. A win over Connecticut (4-6, 1-4) — which needs two wins to become bowl eligible — would set up a de facto conference title game at Rutgers just five days later. "There's still more to go get," said wide receiver Scott Radcliff, who earned his scholarship after three years as a walk-on.

Morehead State suspends Sean Woods for 1 game

By Gary Graves

Morehead State suspended coach Sean Woods Friday for one game after he pushed an Eagles player during Wednesday's loss at No. 8 Kentucky. Woods will sit out Monday night's home game against Norfolk State. Morehead State athletic director Brian Hutchinson suspended Woods Friday after meeting with the coach.

"This will allow Coach Woods to consider his action and behavior, and allow him time to contemplate the appropriate way to conduct himself with his players and on the sideline," Hutchinson said in statement released by the university. The first-year Eagles' coach pushed Morehead State's Devon Atkinson in the back as the senior point guard walked toward the bench after fouling out with 5:51 remaining.

Woods said in a statement that the situation "will not happen again." "My behavior during Wednesday night's game was inappropriate and unacceptable," Woods said in the statement. "I am truly sorry." The former Kentucky guard rarely stood still during the 81-70 loss to his alma mater, pacing the sidelines and getting in Eagles players' faces. Morehead State responded with a physical game in which the Eagles held the lead against Kentucky in both halves. After the game, Woods defended his coaching style, saying he wanted his team to reflect his passion for the game. "How did they look tonight? They look just like me, right?" Woods said. "They see me every day and that's how we're going to be every day. We're going to fight. ...

It was his second intense sideline encounter with a player this season. During a 67-45 loss at Maryland on Nov. 12, Woods was seen yelling in the face of Chad Posthumus while the junior center was sitting on the bench.

Camacho's life support will end

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico— Hector "Macho" Camacho will be taken off life support, his mother said Friday night, indicating she would have doctors do that Saturday. It was a decision the former championship boxer's eldest son opposed.

The boxer's mother, Maria Matias, told reporters outside the hospital where Camacho lay unconscious since being shot in the face that she had decided doctors should remove life support, but only after three of his sons arrived in Puerto Rico early Saturday and had a chance to see him a last time.

"I lost my son three days ago. He's alive only because of a machine," Matias said.

NHL games through Dec. 14 canceled

More than a third of the NHL regular season and two of its marquee events have now been called off.

The league announced its latest round of cancellations on Friday — Day 69 of its labor lockout. All games through Dec. 14 were wiped out, and this time All-Star Weekend, scheduled for Jan. 26-27 in Columbus, Ohio, was lost, too. The New Year's Day outdoor Winter Classic already was scratched.

NHL Deputy Commissioner Bill Daly said losing the All-Star festivities is "extremely disappointing."

Three are tied for Dubai lead

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Rory McIlroy shot a 5-under 67 Friday and was tied for the lead with Luke Donald and Marc Warren after two rounds of the season-ending Dubai World Championship.

McIlroy, the top-ranked golfer, has already won the money titles on the European and PGA tours. He was one stroke in front at 11-under 133 with Donald (68) and 189th-ranked Warren (67).

Sergio Garcia, playing for the first time since laser eye surgery, matched the course record with a 64 to leave him four shots behind.

■ Tigers able to turn back Arkansas 20-13

Jarvis Landry made a spectacular one-handed touchdown catch and No. 8 LSU kept its BCS hopes alive with a 20-13 win over Arkansas on Friday.

Zach Mettenberger passed for 217 yards and hooked up with Landry for the play of the day with 1:12 left in the first half to put LSU up 10-0 on a 22-yard TD pass. The Tigers (10-2, 6-2 Southeastern Conference) reached double-digit wins for the sixth time in eight seasons under coach Les Miles.

LSU must now hope for an Alabama loss to Auburn and Texas A&M victory on Saturday in order to reach next weekend's SEC championship game. Even without a division crown, the Tigers could still get an at-large bid to the BCS.

Tyler Wilson was 31 of 52 passing for the Razorbacks (4-8, 2-6), whose fall from preseason top 10 is now complete. The senior set the school record for career passing yards in the loss.

Arkansas' Cobi Hamilton set the school record for receptions in a career with 175.

■ Nebraska 13, Iowa 7: Rex Burkhead scored the go-ahead touchdown in his return from a knee injury and Nebraska secured a spot in the Big Ten title game.

The Huskers (10-2, 7-1 Big Ten) will face off against Wisconsin next Saturday in Indianapolis. It'll be a rematch of Nebraska's thrilling 30-27 home win over the Badgers in late September.

Burkhead, making his first appearance since aggravating a sprained left knee on Oct. 20 against Northwestern, broke through with a 3-yard TD run to make it 13-7 late in the third quarter.

Alonzo Whaley's interception with 2:11 left sealed the victory for Nebraska.

The Huskers defense held the Hawkeyes (4-8, 2-6) scoreless in the final three quarters in windy conditions.

Mark Weisman had 91 yards rushing for Iowa, which finished the season on a six-game losing streak. The Hawkeyes will miss out on a bowl game for just the second time since 2000.

■ Kent State 28, Ohio 6: C.J. Malauulu returned an interception 33 yards for a touchdown — 12 seconds after another Kent State TD — and the Golden Flashes completed a perfect season in the Mid-American Conference with their 10th straight win.

The regular-season finale was a tuneup for Kent State (11-1, 8-0 MAC), which will meet No. 24 Northern Illinois in next week's MAC championship.

■ Northern Illinois 49, E. Michigan 7: Jordan Lynch ran for 107 yards and Akeem Daniels scored a career-best four touchdowns as the Huskies won their 11th straight game.

Daniels scored on runs of 25 and 20 yards in the first half and finished with a career-high 112 yards on 12 carries to help the Huskies (11-1, 8-0) cap a perfect run through the Mid-American Conference.

Cards hold off Northern Iowa in Bahamas

Wire reports

Louisville had this one wrapped up. The second-ranked Cardinals, despite playing a terrible first half, were leading Northern Iowa by 18 points with just under 12 minutes to play.

Nobody told the Panthers about how it was supposed to end.

They managed to get within a point with 2:06 left, but Louisville found a way to hang on for a 51-46 victory on Thursday night in the opening round of the Battle 4 Atlantis.

"We didn't play well, but when you don't play well, there is a reason. And the reason was their team," Louisville coach Rick Pitino said. "They are really good at what they do. They clog it up so you cannot get anything inside. They will give you a few shots from the outside, which we didn't hit. Our press was very effective, but because we shot such a low percentage, we couldn't get it to take its toll."

Russ Smith scored 16 points, including the deciding three-point play with 5.1 seconds left.

The Cardinals had a bad first half, looked as if they straightened things out but then stumbled to the finish.

"I think they scouted us perfectly. I think they did a really good job taking away all our pick and rolls, packing it in," Pitino said. "But we also played excellent defense and made big plays. We knew this was going to be a war and was going to go down to the buzzer.

"We played hard, but they made us look bad," he said.

Louisville (4-0) faced No. 13 Missouri in Friday night's semifinals. The Tigers beat Stanford 78-70.

The Cardinals somehow held a 26-20 halftime lead despite shooting 27.0 percent from the field (10 of 37) and committing 10 turnovers.

They held Northern Iowa (3-1) to one field goal over the opening 10:47 of the second half and that cut Louisville's lead to 40-24. The Panthers were 1 of 13 from the field and committed eight turnovers in that span.

■ Duke 67, VCU 58: Mason Plumlee, a 6-foot-10 center who helped break VCU's pressure, had 17 points and 10 rebounds to lead No. 5 Duke to a 67-58 victory over the Rams on Friday night in the semifinals of the Battle 4 Atlantis.

Plumlee, who had 20 points and 17 rebounds in the opening-round win over Minnesota, brought the ball across midcourt from Geno Smith into a 75-yard touchdown with 6:31 left and West Virginia held on to beat Iowa State 31-24 Friday to break a five-game losing streak.

■ East Carolina 65, Marshall 59: Shane Carden's 1-yard touchdown run in the second overtime Friday lifted East Carolina over Marshall 65-59 and kept the Pirates' Conference USA title hopes alive.

■ Syracuse 38, Temple 20: Ryan Nassib threw for 215 yards and a touchdown, and Adonis Aimeen-Moore rushed for a pair of scores to lead Syracuse to a 38-20 victory over Temple on Friday in the Orange's last Big East game.

■ Utah 42, Colorado 35: Reggie Dunn responded to Marques Mosley's 100-yard kickoff return for a touchdown with one of his own 13 seconds later, and Utah used five takeaways to outlast Colorado 42-35 on Friday.

■ Cincinnati 27, South Florida 10: Brendon Kay threw for a touchdown and ran for another on Friday night, getting Cincinnati's offense moving after its worst showing of the season, and the Bearcats pulled away to a 27-10 victory over South Florida.

Trojans look to stun Irish

■ Freshman QB Wittek will lead USC against No. 1 Notre Dame

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Not many young quarterbacks would even have the audacity to imagine making their first career starts under the circumstances surrounding Max Wittek at the Coliseum on Saturday night.

The freshman is replacing Matt Barkley, an injured senior who has claimed most of the career passing records at Southern California. He's facing Notre Dame (11-0), a storied football power with a No. 1 ranking and the nation's most feared defense.

The Irish need just one more win to book a spot in the national title game, and the struggling Trojans (7-4) have lost three of four. Yet Wittek also has arguably the best receiving duo in the nation catching his passes and a sold-out stadium firmly at his back.

If the enormity of this occasion is scaring Wittek, the confident 19-year-old with a bigger arm than Barkley hasn't shown it a bit.

"You really can't ask for a better opportunity to show what you've got," Wittek said. "I just want to get that first snap, maybe that first hit, out of the way, and I'll be ready to go."

Although USC has dominated the past decade in this delicious intersectional rivalry, winning nine of 10 and missing a clean sweep by one dropped touchdown pass two years ago, Wittek and the Trojans realize most of the pressure is on the other sideline this time.

The Irish are just one win away from completing a remarkable run to the BCS title game in coach Brian Kelly's third season. With so many pressure-packed wins already behind them this season, the Irish will hit the field in downtown Los Angeles simply trying not to get caught up in the matchup's history — or the history they'll make with a victory.

"You think about it," Notre Dame safety Zeke Motta said. "In the back of your mind, it's there that if you win this game, you're going to play in the national championship. What more motivation do you need? But I think we want to treat it like any other game. Obviously it's a rivalry game, so we're going to be playing fierce and tough. We're just focused on who we're playing against and sticking it to them."

Notre Dame has done its part to make the schools' 84th meeting appropriately memorable. The Irish headed to the Coliseum with the No. 1 ranking for the sixth time in the schools' shared history, and they're unbeaten when facing USC for the first time since 1993.

USC is headed to a lower-tier bowl game, but could halt its late-season slide from the preseason No. 1 ranking by crushing the Irish's title dreams. USC has stumbled after a 6-1 start to a season of enormous expectations, losing to Arizona, Oregon and UCLA in the previous four weeks.

"This is a game where we can get our respect back and get a good feeling about ourselves," USC safety T.J. McDonald said.

Both teams are made up of teenagers and young adults who can't possibly have the same connection to this rivalry as thousands of alumni, former players or football fans who simply enjoy the college sport's best traditions. The USC coaching staff attempted to remedy some of those educational gaps this week, with coach Lane Kiffin and defensive coordinator Ed Orgeron speaking up in team meetings about the series' meaning and lore.

Kiffin also played Notre Dame's fight song during USC's practices this week, hoping to remind the Trojans of their 31-17 upset win in South Bend last year.

"My dad never beat them, so he definitely has a chip on his shoulder when it comes to this rivalry," said McDonald, whose father, Tim, also was a defensive back at USC. "All of the Trojan family is watching. Everyone wants to see how the Trojans are going to play, how they're going to respond from last week. We've just got to be able to go out there and make a statement."

Everybody on the USC offense knows all about the imposing Irish defense led by linebacker Manti Te'o, which has allowed just 10.1 points per game and eight touchdowns all season. Notre Dame's punishing run defense has been almost impenetrable, but its pass defense has yet to be tested by an offense with USC's talent — even with a freshman quarterback at the controls.

Wittek has played only sparingly this season, but has known he would be under the spotlight this week since the injured Barkley texted him after last week's loss: "Let's go beat the Irish."

After two full years of practice in Kiffin's offense, Wittek is eager to show the Trojans won't have to keep it simple as they did two years ago, when backup Mitch Mustain filled in for the injured Barkley in Notre Dame's 20-16 win at the Coliseum.

WKU seniors hoping win extends season

The Associated Press

BOWLING GREEN — Western Kentucky's senior class doesn't want their careers to end just yet.

The Hilltopper seniors, most of whom were on the roster during a winless 2009 season, will play their final regular season game at home against North Texas on Saturday.

The outcome could determine if they will play another game together.

Three straight losses have jeopardized bowl hopes for WKU (6-5, 3-4 Sun Belt Conference). The Hilltoppers will likely need to beat the Mean Green (4-7, 3-4) and hope several other teams are eliminated from bowl consideration.

WKU hopes for a strong performance from national all-purpose yardage leader Antonio Andrews (241.7 per game), Its defense aims to pressure Mean Green quarterback Derek Thompson, who has thrown a league-high 12 interceptions.

"It's been a long five years, and it's coming to an end this week," senior defensive tackle Kenny Martin said. "We just want to make sure we finish the season off right, sending us seniors off with a victory."

Of WKU's 20 seniors, several seniors have played big roles this season.

Quarterback Kawaun Jakes, a four-year starter, has thrown a school-record with 20 touchdown passes. Tight end Jack Doyle has caught 44 passes for 497 yards and three touchdowns.

And defensive end Quanterus Smith — who earlier this week was ruled out for the rest of the season after tearing his ACL — is tied for the nation's lead with 12.5 sacks.

If the Hilltoppers want to see the postseason, this group will have to handle their business at home.

"It's their last home game in that stadium on that field," coach Willie Taggart said. "They came here, they probably lost their first game. When they leave they can win their last game. We've got to see to it that these guys are able to do that."

And WKU will have to do it against an offense much like its own.

North Texas runs a pro-style set that gets the ball in the hands of running backs like Brandin Byrd — who has carried 188 times for 758 yards and three touchdowns — and Antoine Jimmerson, who has added 544 yards and five TDs on 108 attempts.

"It was interesting to see watching film on them just how a lot of things they're doing offensively is what we're doing, too," Taggart said. "Both teams should be well-prepared for what they're going to do. Now it's who is going to do it the best."

A win improves WKU to 7-5 — the same record it had last season when it was left out of the postseason.

Noles, Gators boast top-notch defenses

By Brent Kallestad
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Two of the nation's best team, with national championship hopes on the line. Now this feels like one of those classic Florida-Florida State.

In recent years, the rivalry hasn't been quite what it used to be when Bobby Bowden was coaching the Seminoles and Steve Spurrier was leading the Gators back in the 1990s.

For the first time since 2000, both the Gators and 'Noles are ranked in the top 10 for their regular-season finale.

Defense is each team's signature, so expect points and yards to be tough to come by.

The Seminoles (10-1, 7-1) lead the nation in total defense and rank among the top five in four other defensive categories.

Florida (10-1, 7-1 Southeastern Conference) isn't far behind, sitting fourth nationally in total defense.

Both will need the help of at least an upset or two this weekend, but it's certainly possible that the winner could play in the BCS championship game.

Florida's only loss was to third-ranked Georgia. Florida State, which plays Georgia Tech week in the ACC title game, was upset at North Carolina State.

Florida offensive coordinator Brent Pease is well aware the Seminole defense has held Florida to a single touchdown in each of the last two years.

"They've got all the ingredients to be what they want to be," Pease said. "They've got it all in place."

Florida State is giving up 13.1 points and 236.3 yards a game this season and has 28 sacks with defensive ends Cornelius "Tank" Carradine and Bjoern Werner combining for 20 of those.

"They're going to win some battles," Pease said. "You've got to have some man beaters and got to hold up in protection."

The Gator front will need to keep the Seminole rush away from quarterback Jeff Driskel, who returns Saturday after missing last week's game with a sprained ankle. Driskel, who didn't play in last year's loss, has completed 64.8 percent of his passes for 1,324 yards and 10 TDs and is a threat running the ball with 424 rushing yards.

Gators running back Mike Gillislee is just 36 yards shy of 1,000 yards this season.

"Containing him will be a key factor," Florida State coach Jimbo Fisher said.

Bama to host struggling rival Auburn

By John Zenor
Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — So much has changed since the last time Alabama welcomed Auburn into its immense home stadium.

The second-ranked Crimson Tide, victims of the largest comeback in Iron Bowl history two years ago, is the team with flourishing Southeastern Conference and national title aspirations going into Saturday's game.

The Tigers (3-8, 0-7 SEC) bare scant resemblance to the team that Cam Newton rallied from 24 points down two years ago on their way to a national title.

With everything left to play for, Alabama (10-1, 6-1) is a 31.5 favorite in what might be one of the bigger mismatches the Iron Bowl rivalry has seen. The Tide defensive end Damion

Square gives a simple explanation for what's dangerous about this opponent: "It's Auburn."

"It's a rivalry and it's important to them just like it's important to us," Square said. "I know that they're going to come play some bigtime football. Those guys get recruited like we get recruited. They're real talented guys and they can do their job well. So despite what they've got going on down there, they're going to come down here and try to win them a football game."

Auburn hasn't put up much of a fight against top-tier SEC competition the past two seasons, except for a two-point loss to No. 8 LSU early in the season.

Tigers coach Gene Chizik faces a performance evaluation by athletic director Jay Jacobs and President Jay Gogue after the game with his job potentially on the line.

Chizik said it will take "a near-flawless" performance to pull off the upset.

"Our guys understand this is a one-game season," he said. "They're going into it with excitement and passion."

A Tide win at nearly 102,000-seat Bryant-Denny Stadium would lock up a trip to Atlanta for the SEC championship game against No. 3 Georgia with a shot at playing for a second straight BCS title and third in four years. Alabama climbed into that position when Oregon and Kansas State were upset — the kind of fate the Tide is trying to avoid.

"If your best football game is not good enough to win, then I'm OK with that," Alabama coach Nick Saban said. "I just want the players to play their best game and have the right disposition about doing that, rather than being caught up in the circumstances of what's at stake."

Alabama is loaded with finalists for national honors like quarterback AJ McCarron (Johnny Unitas Golden Arm), center Barrett Jones (Outland Trophy) and Dee Milliner (Jim Thorpe Award).

Auburn has an ever-shuffling starting lineup at several positions including quarterback, where Jonathan Wallace becomes the second freshman passer to start for the Tigers in the Iron Bowl.

"No one's believing that we can go down there and win," Auburn defensive tackle Angelo Blackson said. "Statistically, it's not possible, but as a team we're going to come in there and fight to the end. We're not going to lay down again. We're not happy to just be in the game with them. We're going to go down there and try to win."

Ohio State-Michigan grudge match has new feel

By Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Once upon a time, "The Game" was just another game.

When Michigan and Ohio State played, sure, it was important. After all, the schools put it at the end of their schedules in 1935 in recognition of that fact.

But it never really was an epic battle until two longtime friends ended up on opposite sides and transformed it into an over-the-top grudge match.

"The Bo Schembechler/Woody Hayes era, when college football began to explode on a national level — that's what made this such a visual rivalry for the country to see," said Ohio State coach Urban Meyer.

Now, more than 40 years later, two coaches steeped in the rivalry — each more than willing to toss a little disrespect toward the other side — will be prowling the sidelines in the 109th meeting on Saturday.

Is this the second coming of the "Ten Year War"?

"It's a new face for the rivalry, of course, but the rivalry is bigger than any one individual," said Michigan offensive lineman Patrick Omahmeh.

Just like Schembechler and Hayes, Meyer and Michigan's Brady Hoke are ultra-competitive Ohio natives who don't hide the fact that they can barely abide their chief rival.

Hoke refers to Ohio State as just "Ohio," which makes Buckeyes fans' blood boil. Meyer has taken a page from Hayes and refuses to utter the "M-word," instead calling it "That Team Up North."

A chippiness has returned to this staid old annual showdown. It was already evident a year ago when the sides traded shoves, obscenities and taunts in Hoke's first game (a 40-34 victory) as a head coach in the series.

It's even more palpable this year with Meyer joining the fray, 25 years after he was a graduate assistant on Earle Bruce's staff and learned firsthand from Hayes, Bruce and the others to despise the Wolverines.

Hoke is not sold on the theory that the head coaches, at least since the last of the 10 Schembechler-Hayes battles in 1978, have much influence on the rivalry. But he does agree that it doesn't hurt when both "get" what the game means to so many.

"There's a lot of passion on both sides," he said. "When you've kind of grown up in the rivalry — either in the state of Ohio or in the state of Michigan — you understand it's the most important game of the year."

Adding to the enmity this year — so often the case — is both sides having a lot riding on the outcome.

Friend’s reaction to illness puzzling

Dear Amy: My husband and I read your column aloud every morning, ponder what you might say and often reply exactly as you would.

Now we have a question for you. This involves someone I would have characterized as a close friend until this year. She relocated to another city many years ago. I’ve happily visited her and we’ve traveled together as well.

I had a serious health scare this summer and let her know of it when she wrote suggesting a possible visit with us. When she comes to town to care for her aging parents, she sometimes stays overnight at our house.

For five months she continued sending us proposed dates when she would be in the area, never including a word of response to any news from me concerning my health.

Finally, I let her partner know my concern about her lack of response. Her partner had been very supportive about my surgeries.

My inquiry prompted the friend to send me a vague letter about how she had missed the news about me, can’t go back or undo, but can only go forward. No word of caring about the health episode, yet providing the dates she’ll next be here.

My husband thinks she is lying. She has a history of not keeping up her end of things, yet never to this extreme.

I’m well now; the parade of sad, mad and ugh has passed. Do I reply or remain silent and let her figure out that I’m through with this friendship? I’d like to express a clear view, kindly, from the high road, even though she has not.

— Fan of the Golden Rule

Dear Fan: You had to go and bring the golden rule into this. And so you can also use this rule to calculate your own best answer.

Treat your friend as you would like to be treated — with honesty, compassion and understanding. Her lack of concern may seem strange, but I find it is surprisingly common.

In my experience, people who respond well to a health crisis have a sort of perfect pitch for calamity.

The rest of us freak out and run to our corners, and then try to cover up for our own inadequacy by acting vague and quickly trying to change the subject. This behavior is not right. It’s not fair. But can you forgive her for this major failing?

You’re through with the sad, mad and ugh part of your illness.

You cannot use silence and inattention to convey your message (that’s her trick). If you don’t want this friendship to continue, you’ll have to be honest with her about the reason.

Send questions via email to askamytribune.com or by mail to Ask Amy, Chicago Tribune, TT500, 435 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, IL 60611.

Horoscope

TODAY’S BIRTHDAY: (Nov. 24). You’ll receive more than you give in the next six weeks; it’s simply your turn. You’ll change behaviors and habits in December. The humungous effort you put into a January project won’t feel like work. That’s how you know it’s love. March sends you to unfamiliar places. Save the extra money you get in June. Gemini and Leo people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 3, 34, 39 and 1.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). It’s a bonus if someone can make you smile and laugh, but as a rule, you are self-entertaining. This independent quality will come in handy during the early evening lull.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). You expect yourself to be able to do certain things, and yet your talents are anything but commonplace. Others will delight in your ability to apply one skill in many ways.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). Some never learned the social filters that most people employ in polite society. Others seem incapable of learning these boundaries no matter how you try to teach them. Tolerance is a virtue.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). Objectivity is difficult to attain in a mirror. When you look at yourself, you see the flaws. Then you examine others, and you notice the positives. Just know that other people are experiencing your beauty even when you’re not.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). You go about your business in a pragmatic way, and yet it takes very little to distract you. Creativity requires that you be open to caprice, and one of your whims will lead to a jackpot.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You naturally gravitate to what makes you feel more alive. This seems like a no-brainer now, but there have been times when you simply weren’t as in touch with what you needed, so your awareness is something to celebrate.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Many want to pin you down, but it’s hard to tell what you’ll be doing two weeks from now, so avoid making definite plans. Leave room for ambiguity, improvisation and magical happenstance.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Loved ones come to you first with both good news and bad. It’s because you give what’s needed: a truthful reply, supportive words, advice that’s immediately actionable. Someone provides the same for you today.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There’s a bit of feistiness in your delivery, but that’s only because you sense that it’s necessary. Others won’t readily give what they should unless you demand respect and show that you’re willing to fight.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Continue to act on your outlandish ideas. You’re on to something. Tonight: Notice the one who is smiling but hurting. If anyone can reach out with just the right words, it’s you.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). What you touch turns to money this afternoon. Because you will find it difficult to be temperate with your energy, concentrate on the endeavors that really matter to you.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). Friends are not whimsically brought together, though that’s the way it might seem. You and yours are making choices based on similar inner drives. You have much in common and will be excellent support for one another.

Potato masher is helpful for many things besides spuds

Dear Heloise: My favorite use for a potato masher is to make interesting decorations and patterns on cake icing. Just use a light touch.

— Jim G., via e-mail

Dear Jim: Good idea. Here are some uses we came up with at Heloise Central:

- Crush fruit when making jams or jellies.
- Make designs on peanut-butter cookies.
- Mix up items in a round pot or bowl.
- Break up ground meat when cooking.
- Mash eggs when making egg salad.

of Mansfield, Ohio: “I use the potato masher for my cream soups. Cook potatoes, broccoli or cauliflower in water. When cooked well, use the potato masher to mash up the chunks, and finish the soup. Great cream soup.”

Send your favorite use for a potato masher, and I will print as many as possible and pick 10 favorites to receive a Heloise pamphlet.

Send your hint to: Heloise(at)Heloise.com; fax to: 210-HELOISE (435-6473); or mail to: Heloise/Potato Masher, P.O. Box 795000, San Antonio, TX 78279-5000. Hope to hear from you soon.

Dear Readers: Frank of Laurelville, Ohio, sent a photo of his black-and-white cat, Moo, waking up in her Buckeyes bed.

Frank says, “She is a sweetheart!”

To see Moo, visit www.Heloise.com and click on “Pets.”

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: I bought a shell curtain when I was at the Texas coast and hung it over the bathroom entrance (since my bathroom is decorated with fish). I loved it, but every time my husband would go through it, I was afraid he was going to break the shells.

We were having a party, and I worried that with the traffic in and out of the bathroom, the shells would get broken. So, I pulled all the strands together and looped them around a large candle sconce by the door. This way, everyone could go through the door without a problem.

Often-repeated diet soda warning questioned

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I read a recent article that said drinking one can of diet soda a day increases the chances of a stroke or heart attack by 67 percent. Is it the artificial sweetener in the soda? Is it some other ingredient?

— G.K.

Dear G.K.: It seems like that warning has been published in every newspaper and magazine in North America. The investigators haven’t identified the exact cause of the increased incidence of strokes and heart attacks.

It can’t be the artificial sweeteners, since those sweeteners are used by others in many different ways than soft drinks. The warning also applies to regular soft drinks with sugar in them. A proposed explanation for the increased incidence with sugared soft drinks is the resulting obesity.

I don’t know what to make of this information. I want to see more evidence from other researchers. It’s funny that this information is only now coming to light when we’ve been drinking these products for so many years.

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I finished chemo and radiation therapy in September of 2008. In December of 2010, I started bringing up yellow and green phlegm.

After seeing many doctors, one finally suggested a culture of a sputum sample. The germ involved was Pseudomonas. I was given 2l daily infusions of tobramycin, and after the infusion used a nebulizer containing tobramycin. The doctor says Pseudomonas never goes away, but it can be controlled. Is this so?

— M.S.

Dear M.S.: Pseudomonas (SUE-duh-MOAN-iss) is a bacterium found in waters, soil, plants, hot tubs and many hospital sites. It is difficult to eradicate. Only a few antibiotics are effective against it. Most often, infections with this germ are seen in people who have other illnesses.

In some instances, it can be eradicated. I don’t know if you’re under treatment right now. I imagine your doctor will stop treatment eventually and see how you do on your own. If need be, antibiotic therapy can be restarted if Pseudomonas raises its ugly head again.

Final book of pope’s trilogy now available

■ Pontiff writes of Jesus’ birth

By Nicole Winfield
Associated Press

VATICANCITY — Pope Benedict XVI completed his trilogy on the life of Jesus Christ with a new book on Jesus’ birth, insisting on its significance for Christians today and lamenting that God is still considered by many an obstacle to their freedom.

“Jesus of Nazareth: The Infancy Narratives,” hit bookstores in 50 countries this week, the third and final installment of a project the 85-year-old Benedict conceived a decade ago and began writing soon after he became pope in 2005.

The first two books, which topped the best-seller lists in Italy, dealt with Jesus’ public ministry and his death, leaving just Jesus’ birth to complete the series. More than 1 million copies were planned for the initial print run, just in time for Christmas.

In the book, which the Vatican presented earlier this week, Benedict blends history, theology, linguistics and even astronomy to interpret the Gospels of Matthew and Luke, which describe the months just before and after Jesus’ birth.

Benedict’s findings: Jesus was indeed conceived immaculately to Mary and was born poor, in a stable in Bethlehem. Yet he was revered by even his first visitors who brought him gifts befitting a king — the first visitors of what would become billions of followers.

Benedict laments that despite all the evidence pointing to Jesus as the savior of mankind, he remains a contradiction today — a contradiction that in the end is directed at God.

“God himself is constantly regarded as a limitation placed on our freedom, that must be set aside if man is ever to be completely himself,” Benedict writes. But he insists: “God, with his truth, stands in opposition to man’s manifold lies, his self-seeking and his pride. God is love.”

In his previous Jesus books, Benedict made some sweeping proclamations, for example, exonerating the Jews as a people for Christ’s death in “Jesus of Nazareth: Holy Week: From the Entrance into Jerusalem to the Resurrection,” which was published in 2011.

There are no such headline-grabbing declarations in the slim, 127-page volume, which Benedict wrote this summer during his vacation at the papal residence in Castel Gandolfo, while the Vatican was convulsed with the scandal over his leaked documents.

But he makes a few key points, many of them concerning the importance of Mary in the whole of Christianity, particularly her obedience in accepting to bear Jesus as a virgin.

Fights over prayers at public meetings drag on

■ Communities, courts struggling to make decision on what’s proper

By Jessica Gresko
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It happens every week at meetings in towns, counties and cities nationwide. A lawmaker or religious leader leads a prayer before officials begin the business of zoning changes, contract approvals and trash pickup.

But citizens are increasingly taking issue with these prayers, some of which have been in place for decades. At least five lawsuits around the country — in California, Florida, Missouri, New York and Tennessee — are actively challenging pre-meeting prayers.

Lawyers on both sides say there is a new complaint almost weekly, though they don’t always end up in court. When they do, it seems even courts are struggling to draw the line over the acceptable ways to pray.

Some lawyers and lawmakers believe it’s only a matter of time before the Supreme Court will weigh in to resolve the differences. The court has previously declined to take on the issue, but lawyers in a New York case plan to ask the justices in December to revisit it. And even if the court doesn’t take that particular case, it could accept a similar one in the future.

Lawmakers who defend the prayers cite the nation’s founders and say they’re following a long tradition of prayer before public meetings. They say residents don’t have to participate and having a prayer adds solemnity to meetings and serves as a reminder to do good work.

“It’s a reassuring feeling,” said Lakeland, Fla., Mayor Gow Fields of his city’s prayers, which have led to an ongoing legal clash with an atheist group. The city commission’s meeting agenda now begins with a disclaimer that any prayer offered before the meeting is the “voluntary offering of a private citizen” and not being endorsed by the commission.

Citizens and groups made uncomfortable by the prayers say they’re fighting an inappropriate mix of religion and politics.

“It makes me feel unwelcome,” said Tommy Coleman, the son of a church pianist and a self-described secular humanist who is challenging pre-meeting prayers in Tennessee’s Hamilton County.

Coleman, 28, and Brandon Jones, 25, are urging the county to adopt a moment of silence at its weekly meeting rather than beginning with a prayer.

A number of groups are willing to help with complaints like those filed by Coleman and Jones. Annie Laurie Gaylor, the co-founder of the Wisconsin-based Freedom From Religion Foundation, says complaints about the prayers are among the most frequent her organization gets.

Gaylor’s organization sends out letters when it is contacted by citizens, urging lawmakers to discontinue the prayers. Other groups including the American Civil Liberties Union and the Washington-based Americans United for Separation of Church and State send out similar letters.

Ian Smith, a lawyer with Americans United for Separation of Church and State, says his organization has gotten more complaints in recent years. That could be because people are more comfortable standing up for themselves or more aware of their options, but Smith also said groups on the right have also promoted the adoption of prayers.

Brett Harvey, a lawyer at the Arizona-based Alliance Defending Freedom, a Christian group that often helps towns defend their practices, sees it the other way. He says liberal groups have made a coordinated attempt to bully local governments into abandoning prayers, resulting in more cases.

campaign of fear and disinformation,” Harvey said.

Harvey has talked with hundreds of towns about their policies and been involved in about 10 court cases in the past three years. Right now, his advice differs for different parts of the country because the law is in flux.

Courts around the country don’t agree on what’s acceptable or haven’t considered the issue. In 1983, the U.S. Supreme Court approved prayer before legislative meetings, saying prayers don’t violate the First Amendment’s so-called Establishment Clause, which prohibits the government from favoring one religion over another. But the case didn’t set any boundaries on those prayers, and today courts disagree on what is permissible.

For example, one court ruling from 2011 says that prayers before legislative meetings in Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia should be nondenominational or non-sectarian. That means the prayer leader can use general words like “God” and “our creator” but isn’t supposed to use words like “Jesus” “Christ” and “Allah” that are specific to a single religion.

The law is different in courts in Florida, Georgia and Alabama: In 2008, a federal court of appeals overseeing those states upheld the prayer practice of Georgia’s Cobb County, which had invited a rotating group of clergy members to give prayers before its meetings. The prayers were predominantly Christian and often included references to Jesus.

Towns that get complaints, meanwhile, have responded differently. Some have made changes, some willingly and others with misgivings. Other towns have dug in to defend their traditions.

Citizens in Lancaster, Calif., for example, voted overwhelmingly in 2010 to continue their prayers despite the threat of a lawsuit. Mayor R. Rex Parris says the city of 158,000 has already likely spent about $500,000 defending the practice, and he expects to spend more before the case is over. He said the issue is worth it because it has brought the town together.

“Once the people realize you are standing up for more than fixing potholes, that sense of community really starts to coalesce,” he said.

Other towns have gone the opposite route, stopping prayer altogether when challenged. Henrico County, Va., stopped prayers recently after lawmakers reviewed recent court decisions and determined it would be too difficult to police the content of prayers.

“A SPECIAL DAY OF THANKSGIVING”

Psalms 68: 19 KJV reads, “Blessed be the Lord, who daily loads us with benefits, even the God of our salvation.”

What a wonderful time of the year when we witness the outpouring of love toward those in need living in our community. The compassion seems to sweep over the community as we provide special Thanksgiving Dinners for the less fortunate of our society. It seems to be given as a love feast. Great efforts are made to see that no one misses this blessing and no one is turned away left to spend a night with empty stomachs.

I think we have learned that the blessings are for both those who give and those who receive. I am hopeful that we will focus on the compassion being expressed and not allow it to be just another once a year event. Truly being thankful for our blessings should spill over into our lives as a continuous outpouring of love: reaching out in the name of our God to those whose lives have been shortchanged, often by no fault of their own.

The early forefathers of our nation did well in setting such an example of extending thanksgiving fellowship to their neighbors. Records indicate these first celebrations were held to give thanks to God for all His benefits. What a tribute to their memory for our country to continue such tradition.

The meal is past, and maybe even the leftovers are gone, but surely you and I will not forget to be thankful, for we are truly blessed.

‘Bad language’ reflects lack of respect for God

Dear Dr. Graham: What is your definition of bad language? My wife gets after me for some of the language I use (which she says is blasphemous), but I don’t mean anything by it.

Besides that, what used to be called “bad language” is so common today that no one even thinks about it, so what’s the big deal?

— J.J.

Dear J.J.: You’re right about one thing; what used to be called “bad language” (or even “blasphemy”) has become so common today that many don’t even think about it.

(“Blasphemy” is usually defined as any use of the name of God or Jesus in a disrespectful or insulting way.)

But does this make it right in God’s eyes? No, it doesn’t — and the reason is because it reveals exactly what we think about God.

You’re right: Most people don’t even think about it when they use God’s name in a casual way; you’re apparently one of them. But that’s the problem: God isn’t important to you, and your language reflects this.

Would you speak about someone you love (such as your wife) in this way? No, of course not. One of the Ten Commandments states, “You shall not misuse the name of the Lord your God” (Exodus 20:7).

BILLY GRAHAM

I pray you won’t only clean up your language, but that you’ll also face honestly your need of God. You need His forgiveness, wisdom and help every day.

More than that, you need His salvation, for some day you will face Him, and ahead of you will be eternity — either in heaven’s joy forever, or in that place of absolute despair the Bible calls hell.

Make a new start today by committing yourself to Jesus Christ. Then make Him the center of your life — and your family.

BEST BETS

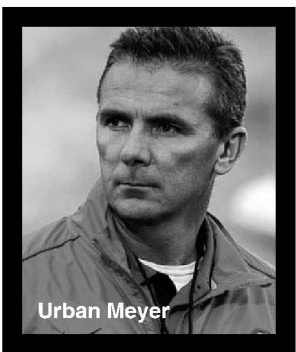

11 a.m. on 25
College Football

The Ohio State Buckeyes aren't eligible for a bowl game because of sanctions, so "The Game" against their old-school rival, the Michigan Wolverines, will have to suffice. The Buckeyes made a quick return to national prominence under new head coach Urban Meyer and hope to spoil Michigan's chances for a berth in next week's Big Ten championship game. Michigan beat OSU in a 40-34 shootout last year in Ann Arbor.

6:45 p.m. on 11
Movie: Red Tails

The story of the Tuskegee Army gets fresh treatment in this George Lucas-produced 2012 drama that really takes flight in its superb aerial sequences. The script recounts how the young African-American pilots were called to serve as U.S. forces were depleted during World War II, and how they used the situation to prove what they were made of. Cuba Gooding Jr., Terrence Howard, Tristan Wilds, and music's Method Man and Ne-Yo are in the cast.

7 p.m. on 10
Movie: The March Sisters

at Christmas

The classic "Little Women" is updated for the 21st century in this new drama, which stars Julie Marie Berman, Kaitlin Doubleday, Melissa Farman and Molly Kunz as titular siblings Jo, Meg, Beth and Amy, respectively, who struggle to hold on to the family home during the holidays. Justin Bruening, John Shea and Paula Plum also star.

7 p.m. on A
Storage Wars

A three-hour minimarathon of the show about buyers hunting for treasure in abandoned storage lockers opens with a 2011 episode set in Simi Valley, Calif. Jarrod hopes for the best when he sees a locker filled with safes — after all, people store valuables in those. Dave has plenty to spend, which means he may end up spending too much. Barry takes some ribbing for his mode of transportation — a vintage motorcycle — in "Make It Rain, Girl."

7 p.m. on 1A
Movie: Appaloosa

Ed Harris earned praise for following his "Pollock" directorial debut by calling the shots on this reasonably traditional Western, sort of a "Magnificent Seven" minus five. The adaptation of a Robert B. Parker novel casts Harris and Viggo Mortensen as the possible saviors of a New Mexico town, with Jeremy Irons as a corrupt businessman who holds the place and its population in his grip. Renee Zellweger also stars.

7 p.m. on 11K
Movie: Naughty or Nice

Krissy Kringle (Hilarie Burton) is a jaded ad executive who has become cynical and resentful of anything related to the Christmas season. But when Santa's "Naughty or Nice" book ends up delivered to her, she begins to learn the power of the Christmas spirit. Matt Dallas ("Kyle XY") and former "Family Ties" co-stars Meredith Baxter and Michael Gross also star in this new holiday fantasy.

8 p.m. on 19
20/20 on TLC

In 2009, a long-running unsolved mystery was solved with the discovery of Jaycee Lee Dugard, who had been kidnapped in 1991 at the age of 11. She spent the next 18 years in the custody of her kidnappers, Phillip and Nancy Garrido, who passed off Dugard — and her two children fathered by Phillip — as their daughters. In the two-part "Jaycee Dugard: In Her Own Words," she speaks with Diane Sawyer about the ordeal.

Tia Torres

9 p.m. on 10P
Pit Bulls and Parolees

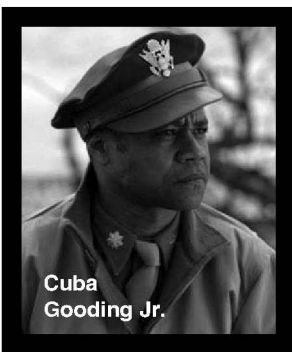

In this new episode, Tia receives a frantic call that sends her and the crew on a tense quest to rescue a mother dog and her puppies before it's too late. One of the parolees reaches a crossroads that at first has Tia reeling before she's able to pick up the pieces.

9 p.m. on 10M
Movie: Philly Kid

Wes Chatham ("The Unit") stars in this 2012 actioner as a former high-school wrestler who served time in prison for his inadvertent involvement in an incident that caused a cop's death. Mixed martial arts became a thing while he was incarcerated, and he makes it his thing, putting his skills to use to help a friend (Devon Sawa) pay off a huge gambling debt. Michael Jai White also stars.

9:20 p.m. on 10
Movie: The Sweetest Thing

Cameron Diaz finds unexpected love in this 2002 comedy, which casts her as a woman who has done everything possible to avoid romantic attachments. While she's out on the town with her girlfriends (Christina Applegate, Selma Blair), a brief encounter with an alarmingly engaging guy (Thomas Jane, "61") changes everything.

Cuba Gooding Jr.

10 p.m. on 44
Two and a Half Men

Is there a new stepfather in Charlie and Alan's (Charlie Sheen, Jon Cryer) future? If so, they could do worse than Evelyn's (Holland Taylor) latest love, Teddy (guest star Robert Wagner), who has his own jet and opens it up to the brothers for a trip to Las Vegas. A fun time, for sure, but it does open some old daddy-related baggage for them in "Prostitutes and Gelato."

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Saturday, Nov. 24, the 329th day of 2012. There are 37 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 24, 1987, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed on terms to scrap shorter- and medium-range missiles. (The Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces Treaty was signed by President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev the following month.)

On this date:

In 1941, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Edwards v. California, unanimously struck down a California law prohibiting people from bringing impoverished non-residents into the state.

In 1963, Jack Ruby shot and mortally wounded Lee Harvey Oswald, the accused assassin of President John F. Kennedy, in a scene captured on live television.

In 1969, Apollo 12 splashed down safely in the Pacific.

In 1971, a hijacker calling himself "Dan Cooper" (but who became popularly known as "D.B. Cooper") parachuted from a Northwest Orient Airlines 727 over the Pacific Northwest after receiving $200,000 dollars in ransom — his fate remains unknown.

In 1982, Barack Hussein Obama Sr., a Kenyan government economist and father of the president, was killed in an automobile accident in Nairobi; he was 46.

One year ago: In the first NFL game featuring brothers as opposing head coaches, the Baltimore Ravens, led by John Harbaugh, beat the San Francisco 49ers, 16-6, under rookie coach Jim Harbaugh.
